B.C. Jobless Jumps 17%

'Fantastic Influx'—Gaglardi

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Unemployment across Canada rose by 15,000 from February to March with British Columbia accounting for a startling 80 per cent of the increase.

The immediate reaction of both provincial government and labor was to point to the heavy influx of people from across Canada. But there was a sharp division in the degree to which this was blamed.

In separate interviews Tuesday night Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi referred only to the migration of "transients from all over the country" and Victoria union official Neil Hindle spoke also of national and international problems.

In Ottawa, reaction to the national unemployment picture brought another call for an election from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and an expression of disappointment from New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

Figures from Statistics Canada show unemployment in Canada increased to 642,000 in March, representing 7.4 per cent of the labor force.

In B.C. the corresponding figure jumped from 70,000 in February to 82,000 in March, leving 8.6 per cent of the provincial labor force registered as unemployed.

The addition of 12,000 jobless in B.C. constituted an increase over February of slightly more than 17 per cent.

During the same month period the Atlantic provinces were hard hit with an increase of 8,000 to their jobless ranks. In Ontario there was an increase of 1,000.

Elsewhere the picture was one of improvement. In Quebec there were, 3,000 less people on the unemployment rolls and the same figure applied to the Prairie provinces.

There is another interesting comparison between B.C. and the nation when measuring the unemployment situation over a one-year period between March, 1971, and last month. The jobless figure dropped on a national basis by 8,000, while it increased by 9,000 in B.C.

Pirate Gets Life

CALGARY (CP)—Paul Joseph Cini, 28, was convicted Tuesday on seven charges in connection with the hijacking of an Air Canada jetliner last Nov. 12 and was sentenced to life in prison on four of the charges.

He was sentenced to 15 years on another charge and five years each on the remaining two charges.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain of Alberta Supreme Court in his summation rejected a defence attempt to prove Cini's insanity at the time of the hijacking.

"I have no hesitation whatever in finding the defence of insanity has not been established and therefore find the accused guilty on each of the seven counts against him."

The defence called only one witness, Dr. Morris Carnat, a Calgary physchiatrist during the trial that started Monday.

Milvain, in passing sentence, said he will recommend to penal authorities that they treat Cini for such "medical and psychiatric care as they deem advisable."

He received the life sentences for:

- Placing an explosive substance and a sawed-off shotgun aboard property used for transporting people by air.
- Kidnapping with intent to unlawfully transport outside of Canada.
- Kidnapping with intent to hold for ransom.
- Interfering with the lawful use of property.

He got 15 years for extortion and the five-year terms were for illegal possession of dynamite and possession of a prohibited weapon, a sawed-off shotgun.

Carnat said he examined Cini on four occasions and "the more I saw him, I'm convinced this man is mentally ill."

No Strike Letup For Big 3 Cities

From UPI, CP

Public employees in Toronto, Vancouver and throughout the province of Quebec, including Montreal, were on strike Tuesday, shutting down civic and government operations and halting all but essential services.

The largest walkout was in Quebec, where about 210,000 civil servants went off the job "indefinitely," to back higher wage demands. It was their second strike in two weeks.

Hundreds of schools throughout the province were shut down and hospitals were limited to only emergency services. Government offices, licence bureaus, courts, highway maintenance and liquor outlets were all closed.

In Toronto, a strike by 4,000 civic employees moved into its second day with no early settlement in sight. Strikers included garbagemen, ambulance drivers, water filtration and sewage treatment crews, road and sidewalk repairmen, park employees and ferry operators.

Supervisory personnel and private operators maintained most services, but garbage collection was at a standstill and refuse piled up in the streets. Outside ambulance crews were brought in to ensure public safety.

A 24-hour strike by 3,000 city employees in Vancouver shut down virtually all civic operations but police and fire protection.

Those on strike included workers at community centres, provincial and family courts, libraries, the social service departmest and maintenance workers. Schools were not affected.

Included among the Quebec strikers were some of the 8,500 unionized employees of Hydro-Quebec, the province's power supplier, who defied a government back-to-work injunction and stayed off the job.

The Quebec government will institute judicial proceedings against unions who defied injunctions ordering essential services to be maintained in two cases during a strike by 210,000 Quebec public servants. Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier said Tuesday night.

In a third case, where he said a voluntary agreement to maintain the services had broken down, the government will seek an injunction.

L'Allier told a news conference Tuesday night that "in general, essential services have been maintained" in the strike which started Tuesday morning.

But he said that "in a cer-

U.S. Military Optimistic

Viet Conflict Widens

From UPI, AP

SAIGON — Communist forces stormed South Vietnamese troops in Southern Cambodia Tuesday in the first major battle across the border since the North Vietnamese offensive began 13 days ago, military spokesmen said.

Another Communist force estimated at 7,500 men surrounded and attacked the South Vietnamese combat base Bastogne Tuesday, posing an imminent threat to the old imperial capital of Hue and to the northernmost U.S. base in South Vietnam.

More than 500 American reinforcements were moved up from Da Nang to the U.S. base at Phu Bai, which is just east of Bastogne and is 10 miles south of Hue.

The Cambodian clash was along Highway 3, 84 miles south-southwest of Phnom Penh and opposite South Vietnam's Chau Doc province.

The Saigon command also reported a major battle just below the Demilitarized Zone in South Vietnam's northern quarter and continued clashes around the embattled province capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon.

Allied commanders estimated the North Vietnamese force around Bastogne at three regiments of 2,500 men each.

The North Vietnamese launched five ground assaults and maintained a heavy mortar barrage against Bastogne Tuesday but failed to take it. They have cut off both air and ground supply to the base, however, and if it falls they will have a clear road to Phu Bai and the only other South Vietnamese base, Birmingham, protecting Hue.

Meanwhile, senior U.S. military officials were reported optimistic Tuesday over the ability of South Vietnamese soldiers to halt the offensive.

Sources giving the American military officials' views said the assessment was based on the carnage reported wrought by U.S. air strikes and the ability of South Vietnamese troops to prevent any meaningful North Vietnamese gain on the ground for the last week.

Senate Ducks Declaration Of War

WASHINGTON (UPI)—By a vote of 78 to 7, the U.S. Senate Tuesday refused to take a vote on a declaration of war against North Vietnam.

"I don't want a war there . . .", amendment sponsor Mike Gravel of Alaska said. "Maybe we could make it clear to the president if there are sufficient 'no' votes that there isn't sufficient support for this war. We ought to at least have the gumption to look them in the face and say, 'We declare war on you,'" he said.

But Senator Jacob Javits of New York said the senate would be misunderstood no matter how it voted on the amendment.

Liberal MP from 1963 to 1965, Pauline Jewett, said in Ottawa Tuesday she will seek the NDP nomination for Ottawa West for next federal election. She said she is "much more in tune" with NDP policies than those of the Liberals.

Traffic Carnage Near 2 Million

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The two millionth person to die in a traffic accident in the United States will probably perish in January, 1974, according to the Western Insurance Information Service.

According to the institute, the first American to be killed by a car died in New York in 1899, and the millionth died in Texas in 1951.

On B.C. Budget Cover

It's Bloomin' Surplus

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A popular folk song asks, "where have all the flowers gone?" Prince Rupert school board is asking, "where have all the flowers come from?"

One of the pictures on the cover of this year's budget address by Premier Bennett shows Booth Memorial junior high school. Brilliant red flowers border a sidewalk.

There is only one problem . . . no flowers have been planted at the school.

Principal John Ewing was told at the school board meeting that an artist painted bright red petunias around his school.

"Well, isn't that delightful. I guess that's one way to spend money," he said.

An ensuing discussion brought up the fact that petunias don't grow here. Zinnias were offered as an alternative, but it was pointed out they aren't a common flower in the area either. The damp climate makes it difficult to raise either flower.

Board chairman Iona Campagnola ended the discussion by suggesting the school gardener find out what the flowers are and plant them.

Blast of Wind Drags 12 Chutists to Death

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (UPI) — A sudden blast of wind dragged a company of Spanish army parachutists for miles across rocky, volcanic ground Tuesday, killing at least 12 and injuring 61, many seriously.

An army spokesman said the accident occurred during manoeuvres of a company of the Bandera Roger de Lauria parachutist regiment on the small, volcanic island off the northwestern African coast.

"A sudden, terrific blast of wind dragged the men across rugged, volcanic soil just after they landed," the spokesman said. "Some were blown as far as four kilometers (2.5 miles)."

Socreds To Air 'Ask-Us' Spots

A series of one-minute radio advertisements sponsored by the provincial government for airing this spring and summer is designed as "an information service" for the people of B.C., not as a political instrument for the government, the government official in charge of its production said Tuesday.

Ray Orchard, a former radio broadcaster hired a few weeks ago by the government to supervise production of the broadcasts, added, however, that some of the questions asked the government might be "policy questions — why this was done and that wasn't."

A press release from the provincial secretary's department Tuesday morning announced the beginning of the program in which the government will buy advertising space on all B.C. radio stations to explain its programs and policies.

The broadcasts will be called Ask Your Provincial Government and cabinet ministers will answer selected questions sent in by citizens. Five one-minute advertisements will be heard each Saturday and Sunday for a four-month trial period, beginning April 29.

An official of CJVI radio station in Victoria said that while he was not involved in direct negotiations with the government, "certain pre-promotional material was received today by our station and the advertising has been accepted by three Victoria radio stations."

He said that he had no idea how many stations in the province would be handling the advertising, but his station, like others, "has instructions to bill the office of the deputy provincial secrery" as the prgrams proceed.

Orchard said the government hoped the spots would be carried on every radio station in the province — 35 main stations, 20 satellites and about 80 CBC transmitting stations.

He said he had no idea what the program would cost, but one Victoria radio station stated its charge for a minute advertisement was $21. If this figure is used and all 55 private stations buy the adds, the cost for the four-month trial period would be about $200,000, exclusive of production costs.

Opposition party leaders reacted with horror to the idea of the advertising, and both NDP leader Dave Barrett and Liberal leader Patrick McGeer said the government should set up a program for the opposition to air its policies on the same basis.

Barrett described the plan as an "unbelievable use of public funds for Social Credit propaganda," while McGeer said that the use of government money for "government propaganda" is "absolutely outrageous and another disgraceful abuse of power."

Conservative leader Derril Warren said he thought the concept of the government communicating more with the people was good but the machinery it was using to do so in the program was not.

Instead of having selected questions answered by ministers, all members of the government should be ready to go on open-line radio shows and public affairs programs to explain what they are doing, Warren suggested.

"Bennett is flying in the face of all democratic precedence in using taxpayers' money for Social Credit propaganda reasons prior to an election," said Larry Ryan, secretary of the 13,000-member Victoria Labor Council.

"Typical of the government's scheme," he said, "is its denial of equal access to the opposition."

Promotional ads for the program will go on the air next Monday, urging citizens to send in questions. Normally, names of those asking questions will be used, but they may be withheld on request, Orchard said.

The ifrst 10 questions-and-answers will run the weekend of April 29 and 30. Orchard said the questions to be answered will be chosen by him and the cabinet ministers.

They will be judged on the basis of general public interest, he said, but it is hoped some dealing with local issues in specific areas will also be answered. These will then be sent only to radio stations in those areas.

Mostly, he hopes, they will questions eliciting information about current government schemes.

For example, he said, many senior citizens probably still do not know how to apply for their renters' grant, and this question could be answered on the program.

Although it will not be possible to answer all questions on the air, Orchard said each one received will be acknowledged and passed on to the minister involved.

Orchard said the idea for the spots came when Clare Copeland, president of Victoria radio station C-FAX and its subsidiary legislative news service B.C. Radio News, was discussing ideas for weekend features for B.C. Radio News with government officials.

The suggestion of cabinet ministers answering questions was made, and the government thought this might be such "a marvellous way of providing information to the people" that the government adopted the idea itself.

But Orchard pointed out that C-FAX and B.C. Radio News are not involved in plans for the series.

After the tapes are made in the government offices, they will be sent to CKNW, a Vancouver radio station whose production facilities will be used to duplicate the tapes in large quantities.

They will then be sent to each radio station in the province.

Orchard said he did not know details of the financial end of the operation, but he understood stations could bill the government for their use of advertising material.

After the four-month trial period was completed, the program would be evaluated and a decision would then be made on whether to continue it.

In the press release, Premier Bennett was quoted as saying he hoped Ask Your Provincial Government would result in a valuable exchange of information between the citizens and the government.

"In a democracy it's very important that the citizens understand government policies and how these policies work out, and for the government to find out if there are any flaw in these policies," he was quoted as saying.

The premier was not available for questioning on the scheme.

Wages and Prices

HEAVEN only knows this department hasn't exactly been four square on the Premier Bennett bandwagon the past year or so. To start with, it's not easy to be on the same side as Phil Gaglardi. It's not easy to go along with the hypocrisy of advertising bans for a certain selected group.

It's not easy to swallow the thinly-veiled patronage that came to light re the bringing of natural gas to our island. To be a Socred you have to look the other way when the government, in the face of strong opposition from Vancouver, insists on full speed ahead for a 55-storey office monstrosity in the heart of that city.

A SOCRED needs the hide of a rhino to withstand the barbs thrown at some of the most inept Socred MLAs in the history of the party.

But every once in awhile, the Old Man, as his ministers, deputies and caucus members call him behind his back, strips away the verbiage, cuts through the incompetence of his own party and makes a major point.

Bennett wooed some of us back last week (at least temporarily) with his call to Prime Minister Trudeau to institute wage, price and interest rate controls.

HE NOTED that governments usually wait too long before imposing such far-reaching measures. He could have said this Liberal government has already waited too long.

The wage, price and interest measures are repugnant to staunch free enterprisers, but nothing else has been able to halt, or even slow the devastating spiral. Our food prices, for instance, must be reasonably close to those in the United States and the price increase in U.S. food prices is now nudging 25 per cent per year. The economy is crying out for restraint. We are not getting restraint.

THE LIBERALS, by their every action, have shown callous disregard for the unfortunate Canadians who have had the temerity to live to retirement age. Trudeau policy has been the back-of-the-hand to pensioners, anything and everything for the hordes of young in the way of various opportunity and incentive programs.

The Liberals have not done anything to halt inflation, other than by creating unemployment. This should be remembered, by all age groups, when it comes time for the marking of ballots. The local Liberal MPs, Groos and Anderson, must fall on this very issue. It is of little sense to point out that David Anderson has worked hard on the pollution fight. It does, however, make sense to point out a vote for David Anderson will still be a vote for Trudeau.

THE END RESULT is all that matters and the end result of this Liberal regime has been chaos. If Victoria area voters want four more years of the same non-programs, then by all means they should vote Groos and Anderson once again. On the other hand, if they take a long look at the Liberal record, they'll have no alternative other than to turf them out.

Some of the bumper stickers showing up are nail-on-the-head accurate. Like, Liberals drink Canada dry. Or, Fight pollution, clean out the Liberals.

W. A. C. BENNETT should possibly have called for wage, price and interest rate regulations a long time ago. But he has done it finally and any sane Canadian, union or non-union or owner or manager, should recognize the wisdom. To hell with unions seeking outlandish pay increases and to hell with management forever hiking prices. Put them all in place with the screws of government control. And if it means voting Conservative, Socred, NDP or whatever to achieve that control, then so be it. Unions and management have led us down the garden path far too long and the federal Liberals continue to look the other way.

Trudeau shrugs his shoulders, raises his eyebrows and tells us that if we don't like his policies, then to throw him out. It is to be hoped that for once Canadians take his advice as good advice.

And if you think the pensioners of today are having it rough, consider what your own pension will do for you in the face of today's uncontrolled inflation. It will go quicker than a sneeze from snuff. You might think you've got it made today, but 10, 15 or 20 years from now you'll maybe understand what today's pensioners are talking about.

tain number of specific cases the injunctions were not respected" and union personnel refused to maintain services essential to hospitals.

The Association of Hospitals of the Province of Quebec warned the provincial government that a "crisis situation" would develop today if non-medical workers continued to defy court injunctions ordering them to stay on the job.

Paul Lefleche, association spokesman, said Tuesday:

"We are informing the government of the gravity of the situation. Something must be done soon. There is no doubt that a crisis situation will exist in some hospitals if action is not taken."

Pregnant Pauses

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've always believed that the only time a woman could become pregnant was in the middle of the menstrual cycle; that is, two weeks after the menstrual period.

Then my sister told me that pregnancy can occur any time before and after the period. Explain this and tell me who gets the $5, because we made a bet.—B.P.

Neither one is totally correct, so why don't you agree to pay the bet to whichever gets pregnant next?

Pregnancy can occur only within three days or so of ovulation — the ovum remains viable for a relatively short time. So can the male sperm. So all told there's a period of several days during which pregnancy is possible.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Ordinarily ovulation occurs about 14 days BEFORE the next menstrual period — after all, not all menstrual cycles are the same length. A period normally follows ovulation by a couple of weeks, but you have no way of predicting how long after the preceding period ovulation may occur.

Furthermore tension, illness (mild or otherwise) and such matters can cause a variation in the time of ovulation.

Finally, it is known that on occasion women will ovulate more than once in a single cycle. People who know the most about it are able to indicate with reasonable success when ovulation is likely to occur in a particular woman — but they're all too smart to be too positive about it, because they know of these occasional variations.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: During the monthly menstrual period, is it advisable to take a bath? If not, why?—L.F.

Yes, it's advisable to take baths then. There isn't any reason why you shouldn't. There's an old wives' tale that you shouldn't wash your hair at that time, but there's no reason for that idea. It's just an ancient superstition.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada entered the Organizaday, the first non-member day, the first non-member country to apply for and receive permanent observer status.

The four-man Canadian delegation was seated with other observer groups at a separate table beside the vast egg-shaped table reserved for the foreign ministers and other representatives of the 23 full-member nations.

The Canadian group was headed by Paul St. Pierre, Liberal member of Parliament for Coast Chilcotin, a parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Eventually, Canada will be represented at the OAS headquarters here by a diplomat with the rank of ambassador, but the appointment has not yet been made.

Canada is to address the General Assembly, which opened Tuesday and concludes April 21, later this week.

The new status of permanent observer was approved in April, 1971, and Canada was the first country to apply.

Others in the Canadian delegation are A. J. Pick, ambassador to The Netherlands, S. E. Gooch of the Latin American division of the external affairs department.

Israel, Spain and Guyana — subsequently approved for permanent observer status — also were seated Tuesday for the first time.

Unionism On Ballot

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyers in Quebec will vote in a referendum on the question of forming a lawyers' union, the Quebec Bar Association has decided.

A motion was passed at the bar's annual convention to the effect that the bar should limit its work to protecting the public interest and allow other professional associations to look after lawyers' rights.

Kidnappers Captured

PARIS (UPI) — Police early Wednesday captured an accused murderer and two accomplices who had used a judge and two aides as hostages in a courtroom escape.

Christian Jubin, 31, accused of two murders, rape and armed robbery, and another man and woman were apprehended in a car in eastern Paris, police said.

The trio had eluded police since the escape from the courtroom and release of the three hostages Tuesday.

Party Fight Over Market

U.K. Labor Rift Widens

LONDON (AP) — The divided Labor party was plunged deeper into crisis Tuesday as two more leading advocates of British membership in the European Common Market quit the party leadership. Further resignations were expected.

Lord Chalfont, Labor spokesman on foreign affairs and defence in the House of Lords, said he was resigning because of the party's hostile attitude to Common Market entry and "policies toward Western Europe."

Within hours, another of Labor's parliamentary spokesman on defence, Dr. David Owen, quit the party's high command on the same grounds.

Both departures followed the resignations Monday night of Labor's deputy leader, Roy Jenkins, and two other ardent Market supporters, Harold Lever and George Thomson.

All three were members of Opposition Leader Harold Wilson's "shadow" cabinet — Labor's high command in the House of Commons. Lever is an expert on finance and Thomson an authority on defence.

Financial spokesman Dick Taverne announced he expected to leave Wilson's team today.

Chalfont, a committed European, said in his letter of resignation to Lord Shackleton, Labor leader in the House of Lords, that he wished "in future to feel free to join others in the party who feel as I do on this issue."

Chalfont was picked by Wilson — then prime minister — to lead negotiations in Brussels during the Labor party's bid to take Britain into the Common Market in 1967.

The split pitted the pro-Common Market right wing against the anti-Market left-wingers who have forced Wilson to oppose British entry into the Common Market on terms negotiated by the Conservative government.

New York

One More Dead In Gang Strife

NEW YORK (UPI) — Renewed gangland warfare in the streets of New York City yielded up the body of its seventh victim in 13 days Tuesday, and Mayor John Lindsay expressed concern for the safety of "innocent people."

The mounting number of underworld executions underscored a slain mobster's sister's grim prediction that "the streets are going to run red with blood."

The latest victim was identified as Richard Grossman, 36, whose body was found in the trunk of a car parked in Brooklyn, dead from three to seven days with one bullet in his brain.

Federal sources said Grossman had connections with the crime family headed by Joseph Colombo Sr., who was critically wounded in an assassination attempt last June.

Joseph "Crazy Joe" Gallo, a Brooklyn racketeer, was gunned down by a lone assassin Friday as he celebrated his 43rd birthday with his family and friends in an Italian restaurant.

Although police have never been able to link the Colombo shooting to the Gallo gang, 16 men with known underworld ties have since been murdered, including three after the Gallo killing.

FBI Captures Hijacker

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A middle-aged man dressed in a business suit and demanding $500,000 in ransom was arrested by the FBI Tuesday trying to hijack a Continental Airlines jetliner at the Portland airport.

Vincent E. Ruehl, assistant special agent in charge of the Portland FBI office, identified the man as Major Burton Davenport, 56, of Vancouver, Wash. He was charged with threatening to destroy an aircraft.

The FBI said the hijacker claimed to have nitroglycerine in a bottle but when the bottle was recovered it was discovered to be "another substance." Meanwhile, the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration said Tuesday it will investigate two airlines involved in recent hijackings on charges they had failed to comply with American government requirements for screening passengers.

Responsibility Betrayed

AN ESTIMATED 210,000 QUEBEC public service employees failed to report for work on Tuesday, many of them because they were prevented by picket lines. This strike "of unlimited duration" is designed to force the government "to modify substantially its position on salaries and job security." Until the so-called "common front" of unions involved in the dispute is satisfied with the government's approach to negotiations, it will not discuss a settlement.

The strike has been called in spite of court injunctions forbidding the interruption of essential services. These were granted because of particular concern over the functioning of hospitals and Quebec Hydro in even a brief interruption of normal service.

Besides hospitals and hydro, the strike affects provincial courts, schools and civil service offices. But it is in the hospitals where the immediate danger lies.

Louis Laberge, president of the powerful Confederation of National Trade Unions, told workers to disregard the injunctions because the confederation's legal advisers had called them "illegal."

Union leaders told hospital workers not to obey injunctions ordering them to remain at their jobs in psychiatric hospitals and hospitals for the aged and chronically ill. As a result there are critical staff shortages.

St. Justine Hospital for Children is among the jeopardized. Some 300 nurses have joined the nonmedical strikers. The nurses' union was asked to provide some personnel to look after 33 premature babies and one seriously injured child. The union allowed 11 nurses to attend in a three-shift period.

These are only a few of many cases of hardship, in spite of union pledges to provide "essential services."

"Essential services," it seems, is a matter of union definition.

The Quebec situation may be complicated, and the facts in the dispute not too well understood in this part of Canada. On the face of it, union frustration is understandable. The demands seem reasonable enough: minimum weekly salaries for all union members in three years and annual increases of 8.1 per cent over three years.

But whatever the provocation, it cannot justify action by which lives are endangered or unnecessary suffering inflicted on children, the aged and the mentally ill who are the responsibility of hospitals. No one who argues that hospital services do not come under the category of essential is likely to persuade much of the public to agree with him.

As for the defiance of injunctions, whether or not on the advice of union lawyers, this is a breakdown of order that no state should tolerate.

Not that they care, but the leaders responsible for whatever penalties this strike will bring and whatever suffering by a helpless public, will have lost for their followers much of the sympathy they would otherwise have enjoyed. Worse than a disregard for the law, they show a most callous indifference to those in need of special care because they cannot help themselves. This is a betrayal of responsibility.

Thetis Lake Progress

IT LOOKS AS IF this is the year in which an accord will be reached on the future of Victoria's Thetis Lake watershed property — the year in which it may become truly and forever a park.

This is the prospect seen by Mayor Peter Pollen and by Alderman Clyde Savage, who is chairman of the parks committee of the Capital Regional District. They have been working on a proposal, still not ready in fine detail, which apparently would include the transfer of the city's land to the regional board with moderate compensation over a period of years, and the purchase by the board, with funds borrowed from the province, of an adjoining 245 acres of privately-owned land needed for the protection of the Thetis Lake environment.

In the last few years there have been both civic and regional impediments to the transfer of the property and its dedication as a park.

The regional district's parks budget has been fully committed for the purchase of other potential parklands in more acute danger of being privately and irrevocably developed. But with borrowing now in order and in line with the provincial government's policy of greenbelt and parks acquisition, there should be little difficulty in financing the Thetis Lake transfers without interfering greatly with the region's other parks expenditures.

Part of the city's previous reluctance to sell has stemmed from the fact that the property (as long as it is not dedicated as park) can be listed as a $5 million asset. But Victoria's credit rating is so good that it surely scarcely needs the fiction of the park's subdivision value to ensure it favorable borrowing terms.

Among some aldermen in the past there has also been opposition to selling the land to the region at a price considerably below the city taxpayers' "investment" over the years — not only the original purchase price but annual maintenance costs. Half a million dollars has been mentioned.

But it is clear that the regional board cannot justify paying any such price — and if there is no transfer, Victoria taxpayers will just go along footing the bill year after year for the maintenance and improvement of a park that serves the region rather than the city. This year the recommended expenditure—for new change rooms and improved toilet facilities — is $54,000.

It appears certain therefore that a proposal to make Thetis Lake a regional park, protected by the addition of more of its watershed, will be welcome among the city residents as well as the regional users of the park.

Ottawa Offbeat

A Big Change in Security

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

IT'S starting to shape up that a visit by Prime Minister Trudeau to say Toronto, Kitchener, Vancouver, Halifax and points in between gets to look and feel more and more like a visit of Premier Kosygin or President Nixon to Ottawa.

★ ★ ★

Each of them when on tour — Trudeau in Kitchener or Nixon in Ottawa — is in relatively unfamiliar surroundings and among comparative strangers.

So security, always discreetly in the background when they're home in all the old familiar places, comes out of the shadows and is there for all to see when they travel.

Security was tight and restrictions on movements of members of the press and public around the prime minister were severe when he made his recent and increasingly familiar meet-the-people rounds in Kitchener-Waterloo.

Perhaps too tight and excessively severe because the prime minister's press office here in the capital in advance delegated some preparatory authority for news coverage of the visit to a local radio station disc jockey.

And out came two pages of instructions to the press — mostly a list of "no-nos" — like no microphones or close-up cameras "while the prime minister is walking."

Then there was an advance briefing for the press with the issuing of credentials — all of this pretty much routine — but all of it for real, because one crew, a French language TV unit, chose to ignore the guidelines, set up on the stage in front of the prime minister, and was booted off.

There had to be restrictions, the prime minister's office has explained, because of the massive press coverage — "so many newspapers, radio and television stations in the area" — with more than 70 reporters and cameramen accredited.

But it was possible the ground rules were excessively restrictive for the reason they were laid down locally, with the prime minister's press office not directly in control until the Trudeau party actually was on the scene.

How come that away from the capital the prime minister is under much tighter wraps for press coverage when the routine here in Ottawa seems pretty casual?

For one thing, explained the PM's press office, we know all you guys, all familiar, no strange faces.

For another, the prime minister from experience knows he's not going to be confronted. When he comes out of the Commons after the daily question period, he'll answer a few follow-up queries, and if he feels like it, hold an impromptu press conference with or without TV cameras —and if he isn't in the mood, then it's quick-like-a-rabbit up the stairs to the sanctuary of his office.

The big difference in security in Ottawa is that the prime minister is in what his office calls "a controlled situation," and the parliamentary police, the RCMP and his own bodyguards can feel relaxed.

Out of Ottawa it's not a situation of "control," and those responsible for his comfort, convenience and safety feel the pressure of taking precautions against the unexpected.

So people get pushed around.

They get pushed around here in Ottawa, too, when foreign heads-of-state or heads-of-government come junketing.

And the security is far tighter than ever it is for the prime minister when he goes tripping around the country.

There are riflemen with telescopic sights on the roofs, behind the chimney-pots and air conditioning pods of buildings surrounding the Parliament Hill quadrangle.

There are scores of uniformed police and plainclothesmen.

There even have been riflemen up under the linen-covered ceiling of the House of Commons when distinguished visitors address Parliament.

★ ★ ★

It's all pretty creepy, especially when you remember not-that-many-years-ago, before this new Age of Violence, when President Harry Truman dropped in for a neighborly call, sashayed up the main walk of Parliament Hill in time to "The Missouri Waltz" on the Peace Tower carillon, and later in the day was enough at home to plunk himself down under a tree on the grass to sociably chat with newsmen while sipping a bourbon and branch water.

And prime ministers used to stroll home from The Hill of a late afternoon or early evening, never dreaming of being shadowed by bodyguards.

Spying May Come Under Culture

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

SOVIET spying in Canada? Subversion and sabotage? Can't be. It's not done among friends.

Chairman Kosygin and Prime Minister Trudeau signed a friendship protocol last spring. There was no mention of spying and subversion in it, unless the Soviet regime takes it for granted that such activities fall under the heading of cultural exchanges.

It's a possibility Mr. Trudeau should look into. His striving for close relations with Moscow as official Ottawa used to have with Washington, could go astray due to misunderstanding of such seeming trifles as the terminology of intentions.

Spying, subversion and sabotage have always been strong features of Soviet culture. Lenin, the founder of the Soviet Union, established special schools for spies, subversives and saboteurs. His successors greatly expanded the program of formalized training in the essentials of Bolshevik culture.

As far back at 1926, the Comintern (Communist International) put a pinnacle on the mushrooming network by opening the university-level Lenin School in Moscow. By now, the number of graduates from the Lenin School and its affiliated institutions which dot the cultural landscape of the Soviet empire runs into millions of social demolition experts. Hundreds of thousands of them live and carry out their assigned tasks in the western democracies. Canada is one of their happy hunting grounds. They see themselves, and the Kremlin regards them, as missionaries of Soviet culture.

So when men like Kosygin or Brezhnev talk about better cultural relations they mean something else than the term implies outside the orbit of Communist rule. Within their concept of culture they are however, quite sincere. This could lead to misunderstandings, especially when people are led to believe that the cold war era with its cloak and dagger content has given way to a sweeping detente.

Here again understanding of the terminology is important for realistic management of relations with the totalitarians. To the Kremlin, cold war means active resistance to Communist spying, subversion and sabotage. By detente, they mean easing up of any such resistance. In this sense, they are wholeheartedly promoting detente as transition to peaceful coexistence which to them means the end of all resistance.

From the Communist point of view, easing of tensions thus requires, from the target countries, dismantling of their internal and external defences.

Governments which keep quiet about these basic expressions of Soviet culture are classified and extolled as progressive, realistic supporters of detente and peaceful co-existence. Any government which makes a public issue of uncovered espionage, subversion and sabotage is branded as a clique of reactionaries bent on wrecking detente efforts and reviving dangerous cold war tensions.

Typical examples of these categories are the governments of West Germany and Britain.

When the Kremlin took advantage of the detente atmosphere for stepping up espionage and other clandestine activities in the United Kingdom, the British government tried discreet protests. Getting no response, it made a public issue of the Soviet perfidy of friendly relations.

Moscow, which felt confident that nobody would dare to speak up, screamed denunciations of the British openly defensive move as a dastardly blow to detente. Revival of cold war tensions and threat of world peace resulted. The Heath government became the target of a world-wide hate propaganda campaign.

By contrast, the government in Bonn, which only a few years ago was depicted as the epitome of blackest reaction and warmongering, is now getting increasingly higher marks and praise from the Kremlin as one of the realistic and progressive factors on the international scene. Why? Because it keeps silent about the orgy of Soviet bloc spying and subversion in Western Germany in the hope of fostering detente through Chancellor Brandt's Ostpolitik exercise in abject appeasement.

The Trudeau regime has an almost equally high standing in the Kremlin for the same reason. What it knows about Communist spying and subversion in Canada, it keeps hidden because disclosure would presumably "offend" Trudeau's totalitarian friends and endanger his endeavor to portray them to the public as trustworthy friends.

The danger of national security implied in this ostrich policy, apparently does not worry the prime minister.

Washington Calling

Capital Punishment Stirs California

By MARQUIS CHILDS, from San Francisco

IN this polyglot state busing raises the political temperature little if at all. A subterranean current deeply emotional stirs the Californian blood to the boiling point. That is the death penalty and whether the action of the California state Supreme Court holding it uneconstitutional should be nullified.

A statewide drive is now on to get the required 520,000 signatures to put the question on the ballot in November. This is a large order since an estimated 800,000 signers are needed to insure sufficient valid names. The effort is being directed not by professional petition specialists but by correctional officers which means for the most part prison guards. The deadline is June 9.

Feeling is inflamed by the sensational criminals awaiting execution on San Quentin's "death row." Sirhan Sirhan, convicted of the murder of Robert F. Kennedy, and Charles Manson of the "Manson family" murders are among the 105 who have been sentenced to death. Because the state Supreme Court abolished the death penalty Angela Davis, on trial in San Jose for murder in the San Rafael courthouse hostage slayings, was admitted to bail. Juan Corona, the alleged killer of 25 persons, is also entitled to bail since there is now no capital offence for which bail was automatically denied.

Behind the drive is the ambitious, hard-pushing state attorney general, Evelle J. Younger. He was asked at a press conference the other day whether his strong stand on the death penalty was the start of his campaign for governor. Not at all, he replied, he simply wanted to undo what he insists was the action of the court in legislating on the death penalty rather than merely passing on the law as contained in the state constitution.

Such a tangle of politics, law and deep-seated passions centering around "law and order" could only happen in this state. Chief Justice Donald R. Wright was appointed to that office by Gov. Ronald Reagan. When the court by a vote of six to one held that the death penalty was "cruel per se" under the language of the state constitution covering "cruel or unusual punishment," the fat was in the political fire. Justice Wright had written a singularly humane and civilized opinion in which he said:

"Penologists and medical experts agree that the process of carrying out the verdict is often so degrading and brutalizing to the human spirit as to constitute psychological torture."

Reagan promptly criticized the court's opinion, stating his belief that the death penalty was necessary as a deterrent to crime. This has never been proved statistically. In fact where the penalty has been abolished the rate of crimes of violence has declined.

State Senator George Deukmejian, who ran unsuccessfully against Younger in the Republican primary for attorney general two years ago, put in a resolution which would restore the death penalty. But this requires a two-thirds vote in each chamber of the legislature and moreover it is unlikely that the resolution will ever reach the Senate floor.

Younger has asked the Supreme Court in Washington to nullify the action of the state court. But the highest court in the land has already been charged with the explosive issue of the death penalty. Already argued and waiting decision is whether the penalty constitutes "cruel and unusual punishment" under the Eighth Amendment. Nationwide perhaps as many as 700 death sentences turn on the court's decision.

The decision of the court with four Nixon appointees now on the bench will have loud repercussions in the "law and order" syndrome. Younger's staff expresses doubts about a decision by the United States Supreme Court against the death penalty and whether it would prevail in California.

Justice Wright was asked on television if Gov. Reagan had sounded him on his opinion on the death penalty before naming him to the state court. Replying in the negative he was frank in saying that much of the mail he is receiving is violent in tone. The mail to Younger's office in Los Angeles is running 15 to 20 to one in favor of the death penalty.

★ ★ ★

If the United States Supreme Court has not passed on the issue by June 6, the date of the last presidential primary, the issue of the death penalty will loom large. It cannot easily be shrugged off.

Militant Women Catholics Defeat Truce Bid in Ulster

'We Are for Everything the IRA Does,' Says Fanatical Leader

Special to the Colonist
By EDWIN ROTH, from Belfast

The Catholic women of Northern Ireland are bitterly divided between those who demand a truce by the Irish Republican Army and those who want the IRA to continue its battle against British soldiers, and even its indiscriminate bombing terror against civilians, until it has gained all its aims.

The IRA's most fervent woman supporters have husbands, sons, fathers, brothers, and other relations who are interned without trial.

Some of the women even want to provoke a war by the extreme Protestant Ulster Vanguard movement against the Catholics, because they hope such a war would lead to a United Socialist Workers' Republic of Ireland.

In Belfast, the most important direct cause of the peace demands by Catholic women was the tragic death of Mrs. Martha Crawford, a 39-year-old mother of 10 children, in the Catholic Anderstonstown district.

Several days after the Northern Ireland parliament's suspension and the Northern Ireland government's resignation (which was a tremendous victory for the IRA and all Catholics), Mrs. Crawford suddenly was in cross-fire when IRA gunmen shot at passing British soldiers.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Crawford died with two bullets in her head. The question whether these bullets came from the sub-machine guns of the IRA or the British army is controversial.

But no one doubts that the British soldiers only defended themselves when they were fired on, and that Mrs. Crawford happened to be between the IRA and the British soldiers.

The IRA expressed its deep regret about "this unfortunate accident" — and sent a beautiful wreath to Mrs. Crawford's funeral.

This funeral, at which nine of Mrs. Crawford's children walked behind her coffin with their father, became an impressive demonstration by Catholic women for peace.

★ ★ ★

Immediately after the funeral, Catholic women wanted to hold a meeting in the hall of a Catholic school in Andersonstown to demand a truce from the IRA.

But this meeting was violently broken up by several hundred well-organized women supporters of the IRA, who want the civil war to continue.

These women carried posters inscribed "We support the IRA" — "Stand by your men" — "Don't betray the IRA" — and "Victory to the IRA."

★ ★ ★

Catholic women who still dared to demand a truce were beaten, spat on, pelted with eggs, and called "traitors." They fled. At this meeting, the IRA supporters were the overwhelming majority.

The IRA supporters' fanatical leader is 52-year-old Mrs. Maire Drummond, who last year was jailed for declaring at a public meeting: "The only good British soldier is a dead British soldier." This was not her first time in jail. Her husband is interned.

"We support the IRA without any reservations," she shouted amidst the wild cheers of her supporters. "We are for everything the IRA does!" Then she asked: "Are you behind the IRA?" As answer she got a loudly shouted, enthusiastic "Yes!"

★ ★ ★

To news media representatives, Mrs. Drummond said: "The IRA are our men. They would die for us, and if necessary we would die for them. My husband was arrested the first time in 1938. Since then, he has spent 13 years of his life in jail without ever having had a trial."

(In Northern Ireland, it was always legally possible to imprison men suspected of IRA membership without any trial for long periods.)

★ ★ ★

Another IRA amazon at this meeting was Mrs. Angele MacFaul, who said with a mixture of fury and pride that her father, husband, uncle, sister's husband, and sister's husband's brother are all interned.

"The majority of women here support the IRA, and will do everything to get rid of the British pigs," she shouted. "If any of these women try to squeal on our men, I'll murder them — so I will!"

★ ★ ★

Some Catholic women in Andersonstown and other Catholic districts in Belfast say they want a truce by the IRA, but that they need the IRA and don't want to strain the IRA's morale, because the IRA would be their only protection if the Ulster Vanguard would attack their district — which could happen at any moment.

They have much more confidence in protection by the IRA than in protection by the British army. After everything that has happened, they don't think the British soldiers would try very hard to protect them.

★ ★ ★

All still think of the Protestant program in August 1969, during which more than 500 Catholic houses were burned down and even more Catholic houses were looted.

That pogrom — in which the police took part — with machine guns — caused British troops to be sent to Northern Ireland.

In that pogrom, Catholic streets from which shots were fired at the attackers suffered no damage. The only Protestants killed in that pogrom were in mobs attacking Catholic districts.

★ ★ ★

Now those Catholic women in Belfast who demand an IRA truce are threatened with the burning of their homes, and even with death. They get threatening letters and knives in their mail boxes. Some have had their doors and windows smashed.

In Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second-largest town (Catholics call it only by its original name Derry) the situation is different because it has a Catholic majority.

The barricaded Catholic part is completely cut off from the rest of town, and completely controlled by the IRA.

★ ★ ★

Among Londonderry Catholics, the demand for an IRA truce is so strong that the IRA's 43-year-old commander (chief of staff) Sean MacStiofain — born in England as John Stevenson — came to Londonderry and spoke from a truck at an open-air meeting of 6,000 Catholics.

It was a memorial meeting for the IRA dead of the Irish Easter Rebellion in 1916, and for all other IRA dead.

Londonderry is less than three miles from the Republic of Ireland, and the border is on the Catholic side of town.

★ ★ ★

In his speech, MacStiofain said the IRA would make no truce before the last internee is released, and before the last British soldier is out of Ireland.

Obviously worried by the Catholic women's peace demands, he cried: "I hope to God that the nationalist-minded women will support their men in our fight for Ireland's unity and freedom!"

In Belfast, thousands of Catholics marched through Catholic streets to the IRA graves in the Catholic cemetery.

★ ★ ★

Armed and militarily uniformed IRA men marched behind the Irish tricolor flag at the head of this illegal procession, which was watched and photographed by the British army.

(Grotesquely, Britain's new secretary of state for Northern Ireland, William Whitelaw, circled above it in a helicopter.)

But the British army did not try to interfere. In the cemetery, uniformed IRA men fired three volleys over the graves.

★ ★ ★

Northern Ireland's Protestants are furious because Sean MacStiofain could make a public speech in Londonderry, and because the IRA could march — uniformed and armed — through Belfast without the British army interfering.

These same Protestants thought it completely right that the British army did not interfere when more than 100,000 Ulster Vanguard supporters marched illegally with flags and bands through Belfast for several hours.

But the illegality was not quite the same, as the IRA is an illegal organization, and every public showing of the Irish tricolor flag has been illegal in Northern Ireland for 51 years.

The Protestants are also furious because Mrs. Drummond was not arrested for her public speeches supporting the IRA. And they are furious because advertisements supporting the IRA can be printed in the Belfast Catholic daily newspaper, Irish News.

★ ★ ★

The IRA's continuation of its fight, and those Catholic women who publicly support the IRA, are constantly increasing the probability that Ulster Vanguard may start massive counter-terror, and even attack the Catholic districts.

No doubt Ulster Vanguard is now much stronger and much better armed than the IRA. But some elements in the divided IRA want to provoke a Protestant-Catholic war for their own long-term revolutionary aims.

BACKGROUND

Pompidou Pulls a Fast One

Common Market Referendum Major Political Coup

By DON COOK
From Paris

France will go to the polls in just under two weeks in a national referendum to approve the enlargement of the European Common Market. But the real victor of the voting before it even takes place is President Georges Pompidou.

Nobody has ever doubted that the French people have always been ready to welcome Great Britain into Europe. Even in the deepest days of Gaullism, they would almost certainly have voted yes for Britain if they had ever been asked.

Pompidou

Meanwhile, public opinion polls show that the April 23 referendum will carry by more than 80 per cent.

The chief interest in the voting, therefore, lies in the size of the abstentions, called for by the Socialist Party, and the effectiveness of the Communists, the only political party so far to call upon its followers to vote no.

The rest of the political spectrum is lining up to vote yes to the point that it is already clear that Pompidou is bringing off a major political coup to enhance his increasing prestige and political dominance of the country.

Whether the oppositionist political hopefuls like it or not, a yes vote in Pompidou referendum is just as much a personal endorsement of the French president and his policies as a yes vote was in the days of Charles de Gaulle.

There was no constitutional requirement for Pompidou to call a referendum on the question of enlarging the common market. The approval of new adherents to the Treaty of Rome could just as easily have been given by the national assembly.

For Pompidou, therefore, the decision to go to the country was far more a matter of shrewd internal political tractics than any need to insure a popular welcome for Britain, Norway, Denmark and Ireland into Europe.

But the device of using national referendums for a periodic reendorsement of presidential policies was a favorite with De Gaulle — who called seven successful referendums in his 11 years in power until the last one which he lost in April, 1969.

★ ★ ★

Pompidou did not serve De Gaulle for seven of those years as premier for nothing.

One of the political ironies on which he is capitalizing is this use of a favorite Gaullist device to approve a policy which de Gaulle himself always said would never happen until he was gone.

This has led to some amusing twists and somersaults by French politicians who are always obsessed with finding a logical explanation for whatever they are doing — particularly if they don't like what they are doing.

★ ★ ★

Thus, Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, the ambitious young journalist leader of the Radical Party, fighting constantly to present himself as presidential timber, has no intellectual choice except to support the Pompidou referendum but he finds a neat logical explanation.

"This is not a plebiscite for Pompidou's policies, but an explicit disavowal of the policy of Gen. de Gaulle," he has told his party. "It's our European policy and not Gen. de Gaulle's which is being proposed."

★ ★ ★

On the other hand, the ultra-Gaullists are still having trouble swallowing both Pompidou as the inheritor of Gaullism, and his policies which they regard as everything from weakness to betrayal. But are they going out and join the communists in voting on April 23? Certainly not. So they, too, have to find a logical explanation for doing what they are unhappy about having to do.

Others who have lined up behind a yes vote are Alain Poher, who forced Pompidou into a runoff vote in the presidential elections of 1969, and Jean Lecanuet, a centrist who was the most effective campaigner against de Gaulle in the presidential elections of 1966.

Also radical socialist Edgar Faure, former premier in the old Fourth Republic who served in the de Gaulle government and has constant political ambitions.

Anti-Gaullist Jacques Soustelle, who spent years in exile from France for his opposition to de Gaulle's Algerian policies, is now back in French politics and is also calling for a yes vote.

Foreigners Find Asian Names Mind-Blowing

AP, from Singapore

When an international newscaster referred to a Malaysian spokesman as "Mr. Inch," five million Inches in Malaysia tittered in merriment for the rest of the week. It was even funnier when at Bangkok airport, in neighboring Thailand, someone paged for "Mr. Tan Sri."

"Inche" means "Mister" and "Tan Sri" is an honorary title from the king in Malaysia. Both cases point out sharply that in Southeast Asia, there's plenty in a name.

★ ★ ★

For Malays, the name system is eminently useful. For example, if a man is named Dato Abdul Ibrahim bin Dato Haji Ishak, you immediately know: A man named Ishak went to Mecca and received honors from his sultan. He had a son named Abdul Ibrahim who was also royally feted but who hasn't yet made the pilgrimage.

But for foreigners, it's mindblowing. Take Inche Mohammed Ismail bin Haji Ibrahim. He's Inche Ismail, Mr. Ismail or Ismail. You don't throw a dart and choose, you look for the name before the "bin," which means "son of".

If there's no "bin," it's a matter of deciding by placement. And you must always use the Datos, Tan Sris and Tuns which are knight-like titles, and, most certainly, the Tunkus and Taunkus which are royal.

★ ★ ★

In Thailand, someone might be named Surin Ruandej. Like the Malays, his real name comes first: Surin. But unlike the Malays, his last name isn't his father's name — it doesn't mean anything.

A past king ordered Thais to have last names, and they simply picked at random. They took their village name, a name from a book or just a meandering collection of unpronounceable letters. Surin is the first name, last name and nickname.

Indians in Southeast Asia, as in India, frequently use the names of gods. You don't call Hari Subramaniam either Hari or Mr. Subramaniam. You call him Maniam.

And then there's his uncle: Hari Vengada Rama Sankara Subramaniam Iyer. His family refused to send him telegrams until he settled for H.V.R.S.S. Iyer. In the uncle's case, his mother had begun to doubt her fertility and went to five temples to pray. When she finally had a son, priests told her to name him after all five gods who had a part in it.

★ ★ ★

Traditional Chinese names have suffered a bit in Southeast Asia. Classically, the surname comes first with two prenoms following. Hence, Mr. Lee How Fook is Mr. Lee. But what about Robert Tan Chin Khoon? He's still Mr. Tan, but he's either Robert or Chin Khoon, depending upon whether he's talking to you or to his grandmother. Actually, to his grandma, he's probably "Ah Chin."

You can collect the above amounts during total or partial loss of time for up to 2 full years, depending on prior hospitalization.

How CONVALESCENCE CASH works.

If you are enrolled in the plan and have been in hospital continuously for 48 hours, you collect the above amounts for every day of convalescence for as many days as you were hospitalized. There is no red tape—you claim as soon as you come out and we start paying you immediately. And we keep on paying you for up to 2 full years convalescence if that's how long you were in hospital.

This vital protection is a breakthrough in health insurance. For a proper understanding of the benefits and cost of CONVALESCENCE CASH, read the following information carefully.

The high cost of getting better—and how to beat it.

A disquieting fact. Three out of five Canadian households may have at least one member in hospital this year. Residents of Canada spent over 42 million days in hospital last year—this year it may increase. It could be you, your wife, or your children—tomorrow...next week...next month. There is no way of knowing when illness or accident is going to strike.

Fortunately you live in Canada. When you have to go into the hospital you don't have to worry about hospital expenses. Government insurance pays most of your hospital costs. But what about when you come out? You need to spend some time convalescing and getting better before you can resume your usual activities.

Most people will have to spend at least as many days recovering after hospitalization as they spent in the hospital. Now that can be expensive, even if you still have a salary coming in. And if you don't it can be financially distressing. What if you have to spend some time in a warmer climate... could you afford it? Or what if your wife had to stay home from work or needed help around the house, or your children need private tutors to keep up with school work?

These are questions everyone should ask themselves... before it is too late. You'll probably think of a million and one different reasons why you should have extra cash.

And that's precisely why we designed this plan. The protection we call CONVALESCENCE CASH. It helps you beat the high cost of getting better.

CONVALESCENCE CASH pays tax free extra cash directly to you after you get out of hospital.

If you're a single adult, 18 or over, or the head of a family, under 65, CONVALESCENCE CASH will pay you $20 a day for every day you are convalescing, for as long as you were in hospital, up to 2 full years.

And the money is waiting for you as soon as you get out of hospital...all you have to do is have the simple claim form completed and submit it while you are convalescing.

CONVALESCENCE CASH provides special maternity benefits.

If you have the Family Plan or Husband-Wife Plan, you will receive $15.00 a day for each day your wife is convalescing following a period of hospitalization caused by pregnancy, for as long as her confinement lasted, or up to 4 weeks for any one pregnancy (maximum $420) whichever is less. These benefits are paid for pregnancies commencing after the effective date of the policy.

There are no maximum age limits.

CONVALESCENCE CASH is especially desirable for people over 65 whether ailing now or not. A single adult or the head of a family will be paid $10 a day each and every day, $300 a month each month for up to 2 full years, if that's how long they are convalescing and were in hospital. Spouses are covered for $7.50 a day each and every day, $225 a month each month for up to 2 full years, depending on the above qualifications. These benefits would supplement your old age pension.

Premiums do not increase with your age.

Once you have enrolled in CONVALESCENCE CASH your premium will remain in your original age classification, regardless of how long you keep your policy.

No medical facts within your knowledge or within the knowledge of each person to be insured are material to this insurance but you should understand the policy pre-existing conditions respecting sickness which will be as follows:

CONVALESCENCE CASH AND PRE-EXISTING CONDITIONS*

Illness or injury for which you are receiving or have recently received medical treatment or advice*

Please read carefully to be sure you understand:
(a) what pre-existing conditions means
(b) when they are covered by Convalescence Cash
(c) how this affects you.

1. (a) Pre-existing conditions means a condition (illness or injury) for which you received medical treatment or advice within 12 months before the effective date of your policy—in this case April 18, 1971.
2. (b) Such pre-existing conditions become covered if you have not received any medical treatment or advice for a condition during any 12 consecutive month period ending after April 18, 1972. And, with Convalescence Cash, in all cases, after your policy has been in effect for 24 months, no condition will be considered pre-existing—all conditions will be fully covered.
3. (c) When you enroll in Convalescence Cash you have immediate coverage for illness or injury that results in convalescence from hospitalization, with the exception of pre-existing conditions which may not be covered as described above. This means that a pre-existing condition does not prevent you from enrolling in Convalescence Cash for while, as we have explained, a pre-existing condition may not be immediately covered, other illness or injury you may suffer is immediately covered.

You don't have to stay at home while you're convalescing to collect.

CONVALESCENCE CASH is unique because it is "loss of time" protection—and by "loss of time" we mean any period of time for which a covered person is disabled and unable to carry out some or all of his or her usual activities (everything from employment to housework to school attendance).

This means that you can collect while you're enjoying recuperative travel or resort living. And you can continue to collect even while phasing back into your work routine.

Pays you in addition to any other coverage you might have.

CONVALESCENCE CASH does not take the place of other insurance coverage. It provides extra cash in addition to your present coverage for a low premium. That's what makes it so valuable to you and your family.

Pays for sickness as well as injury convalescence.

This policy covers sickness or disease as well as bodily injury caused by an accident.

Your policy can't be terminated because of your claims

Your policy cannot be terminated nor the rates changed because of your claims, or for any other reason, unless all CONVALESCENCE CASH policies bearing the same policy form number in your province are terminated or changed.

There are no health questions and no maximum age limits to qualify for this plan.

CONVALESCENCE CASH is available to everybody in Canada, and with no upper age limit. Please refer to Convalescence Cash and Pre-Existing conditions on this page.

How we can offer you this low cost protection

Our costs for processing are kept at the lowest possible level by enrolling a great many people at one time through advertisements such as these. These savings are reflected in the low monthly premium rates for Convalescence Cash.

BELFAST (Reuter) — The father-in-law of a pregnant woman beaten, painted and feathered by the Irish Republican Army last weekend Tuesday defended the men who carried out the attack.

Charles McGucken, 50, who lives near his daughter-in-law, Philomena McGucken, in the predominantly Roman Catholic Bally Murphy housing development, said: "I am not a member of the IRA, but someone has to keep law and order in this area, and the IRA were right to do what they did.

"She had been warned several times and I know she was distributing pills to young people on the estate."

Mrs McGucken, 24, has denied that she was involved in illegal drug taking. She says she was merely taking tranquillizer pills prescribed by her doctor.

Fuzz Tails White Bunny

LONDON (UPI) — British police are chasing a fluffy, white rabbit which slipped through quarantine regulations at the port of Southampton last weekend. Rabbit-fanciers are outraged.

As police in London, Poole, Newcastle-Under-Lyme and elsewhere handed suspect rabbits to agriculture ministry officials, Mrs. Irene Barham of the British Rabbit Council said her 6,000 members were "very concerned that rabbits are being plucked from streets and gardens."

John Lister, editor of Fur and Feather magazine, said, "Oh, dear, this is very lamentable."

A ministry spokesman said none of the suspect rabbits found thus far was diseased, but "bunnies are popping up everywhere and people are reporting sightings all the time."

The object of the search was a rabbit brought in by Robert Williams, 31, a chef from Birmingham, who returned with it from a European Holiday. Williams' whereabouts also were unknown.

When Williams drove off a ferry from France Saturday and customs officials asked if he had anything to declare, he pointed to the fluffy, pink-eyed rabbit beside him.

Customs officials evidently forgot a regulation which includes rabbits among those which must be quarantined as possible carriers of rabies. They admired Williams' rabbit, patted it and said they would check with port health authorities.

The health authorities ruled that unless the rabbit was quarantined it would have to be destroyed.

But by then Williams, can and rabbit had driven off.

U.S. Attorney's Action Rapped

Political Crony Was Helped In Grand Jury Investigation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The justice department's top criminal prosecutor said Tuesday U.S. Attorney Harry Steward of San Diego tried to stop a grand jury subpoena against a political crony who was working to get him a federal judgeship.

Henry L. Petersen, assistant attorney-general in charge of the criminal division, said Steward was guilty of "highly improper" conduct but he defended Acting Attorney-General Richard G. Kleindienst's decision not to fire him.

Confirming portions of a Life Magazine story, Petersen told the senate judiciary committee that Steward in 1970 demanded that the department's organized crime strike force in California withdraw a subpoena against Frank A. Thornton, executive vice-president of the Barnes-Champ Advertising Agency.

He said Steward protested to member of the task force: "Thornton's a friend of mine. You don't have to subpoena him . . . he recommended me for U.S. attorney and was going to try to get me a federal judgeship." The subpoena was not served.

Later, Petersen said, Steward ordered members of the task force to stop trying to obtain the records of the Barnes-Champ Agency, telling them, "I am the U.S. attorney here and you are not to contact this agency again."

Petersen said a strike force investigation turned up evidence that a $2,068 contribution for President Nixon's 1968 campaign had been illicitly funnelled through the Barnes-Champ Agency. The outlay, he said, was disguised as a wage-and-hour report performed by Barnes-Champ for the contributing firm so it could be written off as a tax deduction for business expenses.

"You want my honest opinion," said Petersen. "I think there was a violation of the law."

Thornton, however, was not prosecuted and Steward is still the U.S. attorney in San Diego.

IRA Guerrillas Out To Build Berlin-Style Wall

BELFAST (AP) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army began strengthening its barricades around Londonderry's Roman Catholic Creggan district Tuesday with the aim of building a miniature Berlin-style wall.

The guerrillas ordered tall concrete blocks topped by wire netting to replace the present barriers of burned-out cars, trucks and buses. Additional watchtowers are also planned.

Indicating they are preparing for a long siege, the IRA hauled away the debris scattered around the Creggan's perimeters and marked out areas as playgrounds for children.

IRA guerrillas control the district and administer it as part of what they call Free Derry.

Martin McGuinness, a 21-year-old butcher's helper who now is commander of the IRA's nationalist Provisional wing in Londonderry, ordered the changes intended to make Creggan more secure but more livable for its 30,000 residents.

His move came despite a plea for peace from Londonderry's Citizens Council, a moderate group seeking to promote civil rights for Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland.

Shooting on Tape

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — A dramatic 19-second recording of the Aug. 7, 1970, Marin County shootings was introduced into evidence Tuesday in the Angela Davis trial.

The recording was made by James Brown, a state personnel consultant who was interviewing a job applicant on the third floor of the courthouse when the gun battle broke out below.

At least 15 shots could be clearly heard, one or two at a time. They varied greatly in intensity.

The first shot appeared to be louder than a pistol, but it could not be determined whether it was a shotgun.

Most of the previous testimony from prosecution witnesses indicated the first shot came from a pistol held by kidnapper Jonathan Jackson.

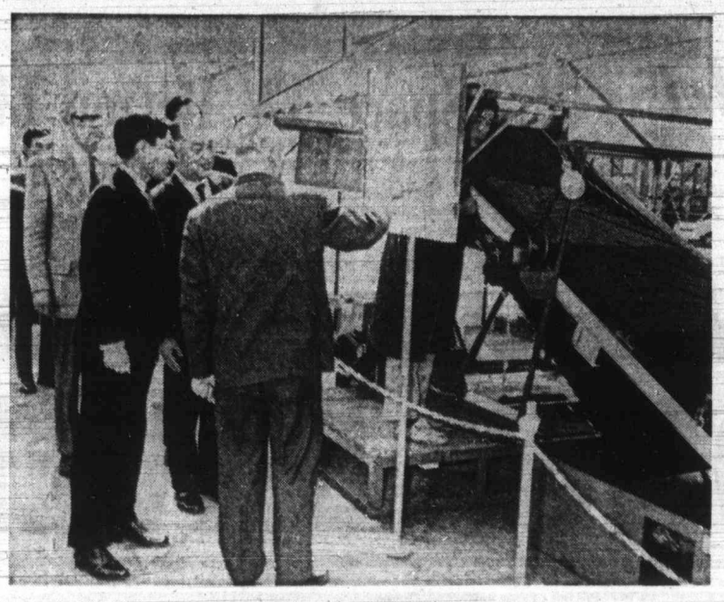
More Stock For Bell Approved

MONTREAL (CP) — The annual meeting of Bell Canada shareholders voted Tuesday to increase the capital stock of the company to $1.750 billion from $1.250 billion.

Shareholders also approved a resolution providing for creation and issue of a further class of preferred shares worth $300 million but not to exceed 12 million shares.

Another resolution adopted authorized the company to issue further bonds, debentures or other obligations of the company to a total amount of $300 million.

Marcel Vincent, chairman and chief executive officer, said the company is awaiting a decision by Ottawa on its request to increase rates because it "can't absorb the increase of between eight and 10 per cent in costs a year."



Slicklicker in Japan

Slicklickers, used in mopping up oil spills in Canadian and U.S. points, and developed by Victoria's Richard and Norman Sewell, were on display at recent anti-pollution exposition near Tokyo. Sewell's firm R.B.H. Cybernetics, has licensed Yachido Sangyo Ltd. of Tokyo to produce and sell slicklickers in Japan. During exposition Crown Prince Akihito, second from left, visited Victoria exhibit. Norman Sewell is at rear of prince.

Securities Business Brisk

TORONTO (CP) — Business was brisk on Canada's major securities markets during the first quarter of the year, but analysts remain cautious about predicting a full economic recovery from the severe setbacks of 1971.

Unemployment and fears of renewed inflation remain the major stumbling blocks.

There was an upward trend on Canadian stock markets through most of the first three months of the year and trading volume was the heaviest in almost three years.

The Toronto market traded 189 million shares during the quarter, the heaviest quarterly total since the second 155.4 million during the corresponding period last year.

Dollar value of issues traded climbed to $1.83 billion, also the highest since the second quarter in 1969 and up from $1.22 billion in 1971.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, volume for the period was 77.03 million, down from 78.75 million last year.

Dollar value climbed 24.8 per cent to $519.84 million from $416.32 million in 1971.

At Vancouver, volume for the three months soared to 257.53 million from 176.19 million a year earlier while dollar value totalled $218.76 million, up from $147.96 million in 1971.

It was the best three-month period on the Vancouver market since the first quarter in 1969.

Base metal issues provided some of the best gains on all exchanges, strengthened by a series of price increases early in the year. Analysts, however, said they do not expect a full recovery in this sector of the market until improved foreign economies generate higher international sales.

Western oils, after strong gains late in 1971, turned moderately lower during the first quarter of the year, reflecting investors' concern over the industry's inability to find large reserves necessary to support pipeline construction.

Industrial issues enjoyed a lengthy upward swing, primarily due to improved profit reports.

On the outlook for the second quarter, Babson's Canadian Investment Letter says: "Uncertainties over the recurrence of a high rate of inflation at home and a slow recovery of international trade could cause some weakness in the stock market indexes."

Minister Proposes Help for Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis Tuesday offered federal assistance to Indians who want to take over small canneries.

The minister said in an interview that such a scheme would be less costly than the proposed Port Simpson cannery north of Prince Rupert. Davis killed the Port Simpson idea last month, claiming it was economically unfeasible.

The minister said he foresees federal financing for small canneries run by Indian fishing co-operatives at Prince Rupert, in the mid-coastal area, and possibly at another location.

He said several deals are in prospect, but it's up to the fishing co-operatives to pursue them and approach the federal government for funds. He said Indian-run canneries could be in operation by this summer.

Europe's Winemakers Scolded by Market

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The winemakers of Europe were told Tuesday that their vintages too often are cheap, bad and tainted by fraud.

The accusation was no sour grapes from a competitor but a 38-page report, laced with graphs and statistics, drawn up by the European Common Market's executive commission. Among the market's six members are France, Italy and Germany — three of the world's leading wine-producing nations.

The report said that European vintners, in a burst of commercial zeal, turned out a bumper production of 4.065 billion gallons of wine in 1970-71, overflowing the market and driving down both price and quality.

More than 20 per cent of this output went unsold, it said. More important, "the share of quality wines represents less than 25 per cent of total common market production — an abnormal situation in a community which includes member states with such old wine producing traditions."

In this situation, high market prices — set to keep production down while protecting the vintners — have been undercut, often by the "dynamic commercial Italian members of the profession."

The commission's report hinted at considerable fraud in the labeling of wine.

Market Blamed

Molybdenum Halted

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Molybdenum Ltd. announced Monday it will suspend its mine and mill operations at Kitsault, B.C., early in May because of what it termed the continuing deterioration of the molybdenum market.

The closure follows a reported $3.2 million net loss by the United States-owned firm in 1971, and a statement by General Manager Charles Penney that the company cannot continue indefinitely to lose money.

Penney said in a statement that an early resumption of operations at the Kitsault plant in northwestern B.C. is not planned.

He said there are 240 workers at the mine and mill, and added that he hoped the men would be placed in other jobs after the shutdown.

He added that the company is working with Canada Manpower in an effort to find the men jobs at other mines.

B.C. Molybdenum is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Kennecott Copper Corporation of New York, a major copper producer.

The firm is not alone in its troubles. Two other B.C. Molybdenum mines have folded and a third has twice cut back its production in the last year as a result of world-wide over-production of the mineral, which is used in the production of steel.

B.C. Molybdenum is the province's second largest straight molybdenum mine and its fifth-largest mineral producer. It already had shifted from a seven-day to a five-day week before Monday's announcement.

Astronauts Fit for Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Apollo 16's astronauts passed their last major medical examination Tuesday and engineers fixed a nitrogen leak in their moonship to keep on schedule for a Sunday blastoff.

Dr. Charles A. Berry, space agency medical director, pronounced John W. Young, 41, Thomas K. Mattingly, 36, and Charles M. Duke, 36, "in good shape and ready to fly" on their 12-day, $445 million expedition to the mountainous highlands of the moon.

After completing the five-hour physicals, Young and Duke donned their spacesuits and rehearsed the first of three moonwalks planned for their 73-hour stay on a volcanic plateau near the crater Descartes.

The pilots worked out on a palmetto-lined, sandy training ground at the Kennedy space center and doctors monitored the exercise to gather data on the astronauts' oxygen consumption and heart activity to be compared with lunar measurements.

Space TV Better Than Ever

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — A new process for converting color television images into high quality motion picture film will be used to provide the clearest TV pictures ever received from the moon, the manufacturer said Tuesday.

The new process, from Image Transform Inc., North Hollywood, will be used for 20 hours of live television during the forthcoming Apollo 16 lunar landing mission.

The process was invented by Canadian-born John Lowry and accepted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in February.

Rubble Yields Quake Victims

TEHRAN (UPI) — Army rescue teams worked around the clock Tuesday, digging victims of Monday's devastating earthquake from the rubble of their homes, as another 1,000 minor tremors rocked southern Iran.

The official news agency Pars said 4,000 persons died in the quake in the province of Fars, 610 miles south of the capital. However, Pars added, "this report still is not officially confirmed." The initial shock razed 45 of the 60 villages and measured 7.0 on the 10-point Richter scale. It was the most severe earthquake of the past decade, the university spokesman said.

In the village of Ghir alone, 963 persons were killed.

Rescue squads carefully probed the wreckage of adobe dwellings with hand shovels and picks, sometimes guided by the cries of victims buried beneath.

Hunters Grounded

ANCHORAGE (UPI) — Airborne polar bear hunters have been grounded for good. The Alaska Fish and Game Board has outlawed hunting the bears by air.

The new regulation bans using aircraft in any manner except for travel between airports.

Department biologist Jack Lentfer, said, "the public is sick and tired of what's been happening in the aerial hunting of polar bears."

Soviet Aid Sought

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The Soviet Union is assisting India in setting up naval repair facilities at the Bay of Bengal headquarters of the Indian eastern fleet, defense minister Jagjivan Ram said Tuesday.

According to some Indian press reports, India is seeking Soviet assistance in manufacturing submarines. Vishkapatnam is India's main submarine base from which naval operations were launched on Bengali seaports during the December war with Pakistan.

Spectacular Netminding Keeps Canadiens Alive

NEW YORK — Now New York Rangers know what happens when Ken Dryden gets enough help from his teammates so that he can play his game.

Dryden, a leading candidate for the National Hockey League rookie award although playing full time in his second Stanley Cup playoff, Tuesday night came up with the kind of goalkeeping which last year brought him most valuable player honors and Montreal Canadiens the trophy.

The result was a 2-1 victory which staved off elimination for the cup-holders and sent the best-of-seven quarter-final into a sixth game, scheduled for Thursday night in Montreal.

It was only the second time in his short but brilliant career that Dryden has beaten the Rangers, and the Blueshirts could be pardoned if they hadn't been over-awed by how he stopped Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks last spring.

In league play this season, Rangers handed Dryden 5-1 and 7-3 defeats, played to 4-4 and 3-3 ties and got four of the goals past him in scoring an 8-4 victory early in the season. Then they beat him by 3-2, 5-2 and 6-4 in the playoffs.

Between the second and third playoff triumphs, the Rangers got some first-hand information of how good Dryden can get when Canadiens came up with a 2-1 decision. But it was nothing when compared to the demonstration they received Tuesday night.

Dryden had to contend with 34 shots, and among his 33 saves were many that were brilliant and some that were incredible.

He twice sent his club into the dressing room full of hope by victimizing Jim Neilson and Bill Fairbairn near the end of the first period and robbing Brad Park, Vic Hadfield and the home-free Pete Stemkowski as the second period neared its end, but it was two third-period stops which topped the incredible list.

Tangled up with Bobby Rousseau after having again beaten his favorite victim, Dryden was unable to get to his feet but lunged to get his hand on a low drive and then reached out again when the rebound was converted into another ticketed shot.

SKATING BETTER

But while Dryden was the difference, Tuesday's game was no one-sided affair. Skating better and with more determination than has been their wont, Canadiens showed more than occasional flashes of old-time form and only some excellent puck-blocking by Ed Giacomin kept Dryden in the position of not being able to afford a second miss.

Dryden's only miss came on a second-period power play, and he had no chance to make it a stop as Hadfield deflected the puck after it was shot across the goal mouth by the pesky Rousseau.

TURNING POINT

Then came what Montreal coach Scotty Bowman claimed was the turning point — a spectacular tying goal by Frank Mahovlich.

The big veteran got the puck about halfway between the Montreal blue-line and the centre line and turned the play into a breakaway with a burst of speed which left two Rangers behind. Giacomin made a bold and almost successful move when he left his goal and lunged at the puck, but Mahovlich stickhandled it away from Giacomin's groping stick, turned in full flight and hit the net from a sharp angle just before he crashed into the end boards.

"There aren't many who could score a goal like that," said the appreciative Bowman.

ROBERTS GETS WINNER

Canadiens had other standout performers. Jacques Lemaire got 11 shots on goal in what was probably his best game of the series, Claude Larose continued to play hard both ways, Marc Tardif was perhaps their most effective forward and Jim Roberts got the winning goal.

Roberts, a utilityman reclaimed from St. Louis Blues in a mid-season trade, was moved to centre to try and contain Rousseau but came down the right side for the shot which won it.

It came on a two-on-one opportunity with Park back and Pete Mahovlich on the other side of the defenceman. Roberts stayed cool, coasting in and waiting for Park to make his move, then catching the short side with a quick shot as Giacomin seemed to anticipate a pass to Mahovlich.

After Dryden had made those two unbelievable stops, Rangers had some trouble getting a concerted attack going. They were making a late effort to get organized when Bowman sent out the little-used Rejean Houle, who promptly spoiled things with two dangerous forays. The second forced Stemkowski into hooking and the Rangers had only 97 seconds left when they got back to full strength.

Rangers were disappointed but not demoralized.

"We had our chances to win in the second period but Dryden came up with the big stops," said coach Emile Francis.

Bruins Reach Semi-Finals But Not Without a Scrap

BOSTON — Toronto Maple Leafs proved exceedingly stubborn about it but they lasted only five games in unsuccessfully trying to upset Boston Bruins in the first round of the Stanley Cup playdowns.

The season ended for the hard-trying Leafs on Tuesday night when the Bruins scored a 3-2 decision, Ken Hodge getting the game's last goal in the eighth minute of the third period.

While they went out, 1-4, in the best-of-seven quarter-final, the Leafs came closer than that would indicate in their effort to make determination make up for not having the depth of talent the Bruins can claim.

The Toronto club lost the first game 0-5, but it was a stiff struggle until the third period. Then the Leafs balanced the series with a 4-3 overtime win in Boston before losing 0-2 and 4-5 decisions at home to set the stage for Tuesday's near miss.

Excellent goalkeeping by Bernie Parent kept the Leafs in the game. He made 34 stops, 25 of them in the last two periods.

Both clubs scored power-play goals in a chippy first period. Jim McKenny put Leafs ahead while Derek Sanderson was serving time and Fred Stanfield equalized while Paul Henderson sat on the penalty bench.

Bruins seemed to be in complete charge in the second period but 16 shots brought only one goal, by John McKenzie, and the Leafs scrapped back to tie at 6:09 of the third period on a goal by Norm Ullman.

Hodge then ended their season when he converted a perfect setup from Phil Esposito. Leafs had one last try in the late seconds, forcing four successive faceoffs in the Boston zone and actually getting the puck past Gerry Cheevers. But referee Bruce Hood had blown his whistle before the puck was jarred from Cheevers' grip.

Bruins now await the winner of the Minnesota-St. Louis quarter-final, which goes into a sixth game on Thursday night and would force a layoff lasting a week if it goes the limit.

North Stars Rally For 4-3 Decision

BLOOMINGTON — Home ice continued to be the difference Tuesday night but it was a close thing before Minnesota North Stars took a 3-2 series lead over St. Louis Blues in their Stanley Cup quarter-final.

Outplayed in the first two periods and starting the last 20 minutes as 2-3 trailers, the North Stars made it, 4-3, with a rally which produced goals less than three minutes apart early in the final period.

Jean-Paul Parise tied the score on a power-play at 2:55 and Jude Drouin got the 4-3 goal when he converted a passout made by Bill Goldsworthy.

Behind twice before they got settled down, the Blues had a 24-14 edge in shots in the first two periods but found veteran Lorne Worsley a tough goalkeeper to beat.

Defencemen Barry Gibbs and Tom Reid got first-period Minnesota goals but the Blues came back to tie each time with Gary Sabourin making it 1-1 and Phil Roberto, on a power play, getting the 2-2 goal a second before the period ended.

Garry Unger scored in the last minute of the second period to give Blues their only lead.

The series resumes in St. Louis Thursday night and would end here Sunday if a seventh game is needed.

PRAGUE (CP) — Switzerland defeated Finland 3-2 Tuesday night in the first upset of the current Group A world hockey championships.

Switzerland now must win only one of its remaining matches with West Germany to assure itself a berth in the top world group in 1973.

Sweden, meanwhile, had no trouble with West Germany, the Swedes defeating the West Germans 10-0 in a scrappy game. Sweden now has four points in the standings, two behind the leaders, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

The defending playoff-champions will meet the winner of the Calgary-Medicine Hat series which continues in Calgary tonight. Calgary leads the series, 3-2, with one game tied. Winner of the WCHL playoff will gain a berth in the Memorial Cup final for the Canadian championship.

Darcy Rota, Henry Van Drunen and Fred Comrie got the Edmonton goals in the final period and Marcel Comeau, Terry Smith and Brian Ogilvie were the earlier scorers for the Oil Kings. Alec Kogler, Richard Kramp, Don Martineau and Lorne Henning scored for Bruins. The teams were tied, 1-1, after 20 minutes and were deadlocked, 3-3, after two periods.

In Regina, the Pats erupted for six goals in the second period hammered Flin Flon Bombers, 9-1, to even their Eastern Division quarter-final at two games each with one game tied.

Mike Wanchuk led the attack with three goals. Dennis Sobchuk chipped in with two goals and Scott Smith, Clark Gillies, Ken Marit and Bill Bell completed the rout. Blaine Stoughton's power-play goal in the second period was the only shot missed by Regina goalkeeper Bernie Germaine. He ended up with 28 saves.

The game erupted into a brawl with 15 seconds remaining.

The donnybrook started when Doug Marit of Regina and Jack McIlhargey of the Bombers engaged in a battle at the Pats' Blue line. Both benches emptied and when it was all over, referee Joe Cassidy had handed out 21 majors, 20 misconducts and nine game misconducts. A total of 444 minutes in penalties were handed out during the game.

The other quarter-final series, between Brandon Wheat Kings and Saskatoon Blades, also resumes tonight, in Brandon. The teams are tied at three wins each with one game tied.

Aussie Veterans Racquet Leaders

QUEBEC (CP) — Australian players dominated play Tuesday as the first round of singles play in the $50,000 Quebec international tennis open came to a close.

Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Roy Emerson, veteran Australian stars, all battled their way into the second round of the singles competition.

Laver beat compatriot Bill Bowrey 7-5, 6-4, Rosewall downed Roy Barth of the U.S. 6-4, 6-4 and Emerson took Bob Maud of South Africa, 6-2, 4-6, 7-6. In other singles play, Cliff Drysdale of South Africa defeated Nicki Pilic of Yugoslavia, 6-3, 6-3, and Bob Lutz of the U.S. beat Australian Fred Stolle, 6-0, 7-5.

Doubles action saw the British pair of Mark Cox and Graham Stilwell beat John Newcombe and Tony Roche of Australia, 6-3, 6-4 and John Alexander of Australia combine with Terry Addison of the U.S. to down the Australian duo of Owen Davidson and Bowrey, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

The closest match of the day was the Emerson-Maud encounter with the Australian winning the tie-breaker game in the last set, 7-3.

The tie-breaker system is used by the sponsoring World Championship Tennis group to prevent matches taking too long and comes into effect if a set is tied 6-6.

The week-long tournament ends Sunday.

Hawks Protest Ruling On Stick Curvature

CHICAGO (AP) — Now a hockey strike?

That's what Chicago Black Hawks would like, if they could get other teams in the Stanley Cup playoffs to agree against the National Hockey League's recent rule on stick inspection.

The Hawks met Tuesday with Alan Eagleson, lawyer for the players' association, and signed a petition against the stick inspection rule.

"The players on this team and I agree," said Eagleson, "that the league had no right to make this stick rule without consulting the players."

"One way or another, the NHL is going to learn that the players will have a voice in the way this game is run."

Eagleson said he would poll the other teams involved in the playoffs and, if they followed the vote pattern of the Hawks, he would issue an ultimatum to Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL.

A new rule was established at the start of the playoffs this year whereby a league supervisor inspects each players' sticks before a game and stamps them with a blue mark of approval if the curvature is one-half inch or less.

STAPLETON INVOLVED

Before the start of the recent Pittsburgh series, which the Hawks swept in four games, defenceman Pat Stapleton's sticks did not meet approval. Stapleton changed sticks but wasn't happy about it.

In the final minute of the second game of the series last Thursday, play was stopped, and Dennis Hull's stick was found to be illegal by Dutch Van Deelen, supervisor of officials.

Dennis was slapped with a $500 fine by Campbell, and the Black Hawk club was fined another $500.

Eagleson said after returning to Toronto he polled Boston Bruins players who held a meeting before their Tuesday night game against Toronto Maple Leafs and they rejected the Chicago strike move.

Eagleson said the Bruins voted 10-to-8 against strike action and 15 to 3 against a Chicago proposal that the maximum curvature of sticks be increased.

The Toronto lawyer said the Bruins voted in favor of a proposal that Eagleson "berate the owners" for setting up the stick check system in the playoffs without the approval of the players.

Auto Racers Set for Busy Season

Western Speedway unfolds its 19th season Sunday with a program of super-stock and stock-car racing.

At a kickoff luncheon Tuesday at the Red Lion Inn, Reg Midgley, manager of the track, unveiled the 1972 schedule, which has 21 racing dates, 18 on Saturday nights. There are eight Sunday afternoon programs, three afternoon shows on holiday Mondays and one each on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Bing Foster, track announcer at Western, explaining the three Sunday cards in April, said the spectators would be much warmer with afternoon cards. Four Sunday races are also scheduled during September.

Returning for their third season are the International Drivers' Challenge series, which has attracted drivers and cars from as far south as California.

Howard McFaden of Seattle, co-ordinator of the 1972 IDC, said the addition of Nanaimo to the circuit plus the increase in purses should guarantee many more competitors making the trip to Vancouver Island this summer.

The IDC super-stock race at Western Speedway is scheduled for Wednesday, July 18. The series, which offers more than $20,000 in prize money, will include seven races in a space of nine days. The super-modifieds on the IDC circuit are scheduled to be at Western on Tuesday, Aug. 15, as part of a series which offers $25,000 in prize money.

Another highlight of the season will be the NASCAR (National Association of Stock Car Racing Association) Western Grand National race on Monday, July 3.

This season's Daffodil Cup race is spread over two days, May 6 and 7. There will also be three Saturdays when Washington Racing Association cars will be competing at Western.

Sunday's time trials get under way at 1 p.m. and racing will start at 2:00. Gates open at noon.

Construction of a $4 million salmon hatchery with 18 rearing ponds could start on the Cold Creek tributary of the Quinsam River as early as Sept. 1.

The Sheringham Point to Swartz Bay sports fishing reserve will remain as is, at least for this coming fishing season.

Value to British Columbia of the new herring fishery for roe to Japan was $20 million this year, one quarter of the total of the British Columbia commercial salmon fisher: But, the federal fisheries department has "no intention of gambling with herring stocks." And there is no likelihood the herring fishery will ever again be able to take the 200,000 ton quota of a few years ago, when B.C. herring stocks declined to dangerous levels. This year 50,000 tons have been harvested.

In 1971 there was 324 miles of spawn deposited on B.C. shorelines. This year it looks like there will be just as much. The 25-year average is 200 miles of spawn. In 1967 it dropped to 95 miles.

There was virtually no incidental catch of salmon or grilse in herring fishing nets this year under the carefully-monitored herring roe fishery.

Those are some of the highlights that come out of a no-holds-barred meeting between Amalgamated Conservation Socley members and federal fisheries officials, including Southern Operations Fisheries Manager Dick Crouder; Ian Todd, chief of fisheries for Johnstone Strait-Fraser River and Juan de Fuca, chief herring biologist Bob Humphries and Victoria-area inspector Harry Grainger.

The Cold Creek hatchery in the Campbell River system will take about 18 months to complete, which means that a Sept. 1 start could put it in full operation by Feb. 1974.

It should put $1½ million worth of fish a year into the economy from sports and commercial fisheries and will cost around $300,000 a year to operate.

It is planned to develop brood stock from Quinsam coho and Campbell River chinooks, and the project will include extra incubation room for 5 million eggs from which it would be possible to transplant fry into nearby systems like the Bear River.

Biologists are also studying the Koksilah and Cowichan Rivers with a view to a southern Vancouver Island hatchery.

A hatchery has been completed on the Capilano, first of six planned for British Columbia. Already that hatchery is becoming a tourist attraction with up to 400,000 people expected to tour it this year. The Cheakemus and Vedder systems are under consideration for additional hatcheries.

Crouder referred to the hatcheries as "a system for Gulf of Georgia." They are setting a target of 1 million adult coho and 300,000 chinooks as hatchery production for the first 10 years for both sports and commercial fisheries.

"We think it is only a matter of time until we will be able to produce fish that will stay inside the Gulf of Georgia," Crouder said.

For the six hatcheries they are talking of an eventual annual production of 4 million adult coho from 15 million coho smolts. Space is being provided in each hatchery for steelhead production.

The hatcheries will give the capability to produce coho for release in areas above obstructions where normally there are no coho.

Incubation of eggs is no problem. Rearing facilities are a major problem," said Crouder in explaining how barren water above obstructions could be used as rearing waters. Natural impoundments such as cloughs and small lakes can be used for rearing chinooks.

* * *

Crouder said negotiations are under way to initiate a dogfish market in Germany. He said 75,000 tons of dogfish would have to be removed each year from B.C. waters to cause any decline in stocks.

Sports fishermen exclaimed great indignation at the resumption of the herring fishing, especially the waste of the herring carcasses after the roe has been extracted. But, Crouder indicated, the herring fishing is so profitable it is here to stay. He assured sportsmen "a carefully controlled (herring) fishery would not effect the total abundance of coho or chinook stocks."

Sportsmen relate the availability of herring as forage to the population of chinooks and coho available for anglers.

Crouder said fisheries researchers will start studies this year to determine the relation between herring stocks and salmon stocks. He promised there would be no wholesale export of herring.

He explained the herring industry "must be labor intensive and that labor must be employed here." He said 2,000 women were employed this year to strip herring roe.

He said the researchers at Nanaimo are "looking into the use of herring products" and added there is some possibilities of government-sponsored marketing programs. Some 25,000 cases of herring were canned this year under a government-sponsored aid program.

Crouder gave figures to prove there had not been a single area where too many herring had been taken this year and where there had not been an adequate spawn this year.

"It was a new fihery. There were fewer abuses than we expected. I think this year — being a first year operation — it was fairly satisfactory," he said.

Baseball Strike Nears Settlement

Pay Issue Remains Stumbling Block

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking baseball players settled their money differences with major league club owners Tuesday night, but rejected an offer to pay them proportionately for make-up games other than doubleheaders.

John Gaherin, negotiator for the owners, said agreement was reached on a contribution of $500,000 a year to the pension fund on top of the owners' original offer of $490,000.

Thus, the money issue became moot after that compromise, which saw the owners go up to $500,000 from $400,000 and the players come down from $600,000.

The players had been seeking a 17-per-cent increase in retirement benefits, which would have come to more than $900,000. The owners currently contribute $5.4 million annually to the pension plan.

Gaherin said the players turned down the offer to pay them if a game lost to the strike were made up on an open date or as part of a split-admission doubleheader, but not if it were made part of a twin bill.

The players' rejection came as the owners turned down two more proposals by the players but went into still further conferences to consider a slight modification of the second proposal.

The owners first turned down the players' $600,000 proposal and next an offer to play "into September" while negotiations on salary for make-up games continued. The roadblock to this was the provision that the matter go to arbitration if not settled by September.

The players then modified their second plan and offered to give the owners full power to reschedule lost games any way they wanted, "insane as it may be," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Miller said the offer to play into September was made because, "We're hopeful there'll be more logic and less emotion by then and tempers might be cooled."

MEETING PLANNED

A reliable source, meanwhile told AP that the owners had scheduled a meeting in New York for Wednesday and revealed the owners' hope for a Friday beginning of the season.

There seemed to be little doubt that the issue of whether the players are paid for an 162-game schedule was the key to any settlement, having possibly become more a matter of principle than money.

Pitcher Milt Pappas of Chicago Cubs, attending the meeting of player representatives that came up with the new proposal, said, "There is no new way of compromising on full pay."

Miller said much the same Monday.

The position of some club executives such as Bavasi, on the full pay issue is that the season consists of 182 days rather than 162 games and that the players be docked one day's pay for each day of the strike during the regular season. The regular season was scheduled to open last Wednesday.

The players' counter-proposal consisted of three parts—rejection of the owners' $400,000 offer, their own counter-offer of $600,000 and their stand on full pay. The proposal on full pay for full play consisted of the following:

- If the schedule were picked up at some point, the players will assume loss of salary up to the date of settlement of the strike.
- If 162-game season is rescheduled, the players will be paid their full salaries for the entire season.
- If a rescheduled season consist of less than 162 games, then the players will assume a loss of one day's salary for each game not scheduled.

The one day's loss of salary would be equivalent to one day for each day of the 182-day season or 1-182nd for every game not rescheduled.

Referee Offers Ring Testimony

WINNIPEG (CP) — A "vicious uppercut halfway through the sixth round" that landed on the chin of Stewart Gray could have been the punch that contributed most to the death of the Toronto boxer, one of two referees who worked an ill-fated Feb. 21 boxing card said Tuesday.

Peter Piper of Winnipeg made the statement to the one-man commission investigating the four-fight card that resulted in the death of the 27-year-old light-heavyweight, and allegations by another fighter that he threw his bout against Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo because his life was threatened.

Piper said that, after the hard uppercut thrown by Canadian light-heavyweight champion Al Sparks of Winnipeg, "he (Gray) was forcing his feet . . . sort of stomping around."

Piper told County Court Judge Benjamin Hewak that, had he been one of Gray's handlers, he would not have let the fight continue.

He said Gray's legs, in the seventh round, "were still doing the same thing, not responding properly" when he was knocked out by the only punch of the round, a left hook.

Piper, who fought for the Canadian amateur heavyweight title in 1956 but lost in the second round to Chuvalo, said he was hoping the fight would be stopped after the sixth round because Gray "was outclassed."

LEGS RIGID

Piper, one of the first men into the ring after the knockout, testified: "I walked over and saw his (Gray's) legs were completely rigid . . . there were spasms and it took two of us to pry his legs apart and straight."

Gray died about 24 hours later in hospital after undergoing brain surgery.

Piper and referee Steve Trojack, also of Winnipeg, said the bout between Chuvalo and Jim Christopher of Detroit, was legitimate and Christopher "took a beating."

Canadians Called 'Obstinate' By International Puck Czar

PRAGUE (AP) — International amateur hockey needs the Canadians back, John "Bunny" Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey League said here Tuesday. "But not on their terms."

He said it was the Canadians who "walked out on us" and it was not the federation that excluded them.

"There are only two nations with professional hockey; how can they (the Canadians) expect the other 27-member-states of the federation to subject themselves to their wishes?" the Briton asked.

"America understood it and fields amateurs in the competition, but Canada is obstinate," he said.

Ahearne, 72, long-standing federation president, said the international body has no objections to any teams playing Canada in exhibition games.

"But we refuse to allow the Canadians to play in tournaments on their terms."

Ahearne's statement followed one Monday by Joe Kryczka, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, who said Canada's terms for re-entering the world hockey championships remain unchanged.

"We think that every Canadian citizen, regardless of whether he is a professional or not, should be allowed to play for his country, Kryczka, a Calgary lawyer, added.

Both he and Ahearne are attending the current world championships in this Czechoslovakian city.

Ahearne also said the Russians could beat almost all professional National Hockey League teams with the possible exception of Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins, Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers.

"But even against these four they'd stand a good chance," he added.

He said that the NHL "at a meeting some five years ago" barred the affiliated clubs from playing against Russia.

"They enjoy the opinion of 'unbeatables'," he said. "And what if they should lose . . .?"

He also said that the federation went so far as to permit the Canadians to reinstate their pros to amateur status as late as February. "We did all we could, bar begging them on our knees. It is Canada who excluded herself."

Knicks Earn Spot In Eastern Final

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks, with Jerry Lucas and Bill Bradley leading a desperation drive, outscored Baltimore 19-8 down the homestretch to beat the Bullets 107-101 Tuesday and win their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference semi-final series.

The Knicks, by taking the best-of-seven series four games to two, now will meet Boston Celtics in the conference final. The Celtics won the Atlantic Division title, finishing eight games in front of the Knicks with whom they split their season series 3-3.

The Bullets trailing most of the way, scrambled to a 93-88 lead with four minutes remaining. The Knicks then came through with their decisive surge.

Archie Clark of Baltimore led all scorers with 31 points.

Ontario Youths Dominate National Fivepin Event

SUDBURY, Ont. — Ontario bowlers won most of the titles in the Youth Bowling Council's Canadian fivepin championships which ended here Tuesday.

Todd Niemi of Thunder Bay and Janice Sproule of Azilda took the bantam singles titles, Estelle Montpellier of Chelmsford captured the junior girls singles and the senior boys' team from Hamilton were winners in the four-day event.

Manitoba grabbed three titles when the bantam boys and junior boys and girls from East Kildonan walked off with team titles.

ISLANDERS SIXTH

Merylen Bunnage of Victoria and Ken Masters of Nanaimo, the only two bowlers from Vancouver Island to get past the provincial stage of the competition, both finished sixth in their respective divisions. Bunnage, who was in a three-way tie for second place with Niemi and Paul Boucher of Toronto on Monday, ended with a 7-7 record in match-play rounds. Masters, leader after Sunday's play with a 4-0 record, dropped all six matches Monday and wound up with a 5-9 mark.

A team from Port Coquitlam took the bantam girls' team championship with a 9-3 record.

Bruce Hamlyn of Corner Brook, Newfoundland, won the junior boys singles by beating Denis Morin of Waterloo in a playoff.

The tournament was the climax of the YBC Four-Steps-To Stardom program which started with house rolloffs and graduated to zone and provincial championships before the national final. A total of 258 competitors, aged eight to 20, participated in the finals.

New Zealand Plays To Cricket Draw

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (Reuter) — The fourth cricket Test between the West Indies and New Zealand faded quietly to a draw Tuesday with New Zealand batters again dominating play.

The New Zealanders, replying to the West Indies first innings of 365 for seven declared, made 543 for three declared. The West Indies were 86 for no wicket in their second innings at the close.

Glenn Turner, the New Zealand opener, contributed 259 to his side's score which beat the previous New Zealand record total of 505 against South Africa in 1953-54.

Turner's score was also a New Zealand record, topping the 239 scored by Graham Dowling against India at Christchurch in 1968.

Turner now has an average of over 100 for both the tour and the Test series. His tour average is 104.7 and his test average 103.5.

All four tests have been drawn and the result of the series now hinges on the final match in Trinidad later this month.

Turner was 210 not out when play resumed Tuesday with New Zealand 410 for one.

Shortly before lunch, Turner fell leg before wicket to a low ball from off-spinner Tony Howard. He had batted for 704 minutes and hit 22 fours.

Colonist - Newsday Service

BETHPAGE, L.I. — U.S. Transportation secretary John Volpe offered a vision of 300-mile-an-hour coast-to-coast ground transport Tuesday during the unveiling of a $7 million prototype air-cushion vehicle at Grumman Aerospace Corp.

Speaking to several hundred Grumman employees and guests at ceremonies in a Grumman hangar, Volpe called the prototype "the most sophisticated ground transportation vehicle ever built in the U.S." He said it would be the forerunner of silent-running, electric, pollution-free passenger vehicles which may someday link the nation's cities.

With its fresh white paint shimmering under spotlights, the prototype resembled a 51-foot, jet-propelled breadbox. Three roof-mounted turbofan engines at the back of the vehicle will push it at speeds up to 120 miles-an-hour when test runs begin late this summer at the transportation department's proving grounds near Pueblo, Colo. The vehicle is designed to ride in a u-shaped concrete guideway on a one-half to three-quarter-inch cushion of air spewed from ducts under and alongside the chassis.

If tests begin on schedule, only two miles of a planned 22-mile oval guideway will be finished for the vehicle's first run, federal officials said. Completion of the entire test track will take at least two more years, they said.

Ten electric motors, one to be installed in November and one to be added in 1973, should boost the vehicle's top speed to 300 miles-an-hour, Volpe said. Two operators and two observers can ride in the vehicle's airplane-style cockpit during tests.

Transportation department officials emphasized that the prototype was built solely to test high-speed transit concepts. Commerical passenger-carrying models are three to four years away, Volph said. Several department and Grumman officials said they regarded that prediction as optimistic.

A Grumman spokesman said that the approximately 155 engineers and shop personnel who have worked on the vehicle during the past nine months would be absorbed into other company projects. Future high-speed vehicle production will depend on finding a customer and that appears to be "some time away," another spokesman said.

Saanich Chooses New Engineer

Saanich has appointed James Daye of Fredericton, N. B. as the municipality's engineer, it was announced Tuesday.

The appointment was the culmination of a competition involving about 40 applicants from across Canada who were screened and processed during the past six weeks.

Daye, 46, was chief engineer with a consulting firm in Fredericton immediately before his Saanich appointment which he will take up May 1.

He also was city engineer of Westmount, Que., for about 20 years. Daye received his engineering degree from the University of New Brunswick in 1946.

He succeeds Neville Life, who died recently after a long illness.

The decision was made at a Saanich council meeting Monday night and municipal staff was advised Tuesday morning, before the public announcement occurred.

Brothers Meets Chairmen

College Ills Given Airing

Chairmen of regional college councils from throughout B.C. met with Education Minister Donald Brothers in Vancouver Tuesday to discuss with him some of the problems of the newly-established college system.

Dr. Carron Jameson, chairman of Greater Victoria's Camosun College council, said he found the meeting useful and informative.

Brothers and his officials were generally "reasonable" and sympathetic to the problems facing the regional colleges, Jameson said after he returned from the meeting.

He suggested that since the colleges were now firmly established in the province, they should have their own act governing them, rather than falling under the Public Schools Act.

They also urged that the provincial government pay a larger proportion of capital costs of colleges and that there be more co-ordination between colleges to eliminate needless duplication of programs and specialized facilities.

Jameson said that in talking with the other presidents he realized how lucky Camosun College is in that it had facilities available in the Landsdowne campus when it was established, and in that it has only one school board to satisfy.

The movement of workers to B.C. is also shown by the government figures. The total Canadian work force increased by 1.2 per cent between February and March to 8,658,000. In B.C., the work force went up 3.13 per cent to 955,000 — and increase of 29,000.

Over the one-year period ending in March the increase in the Canadian work force was 3.86 per cent, while it was 8.77 per cent in B.C.

Gaglardi said there was a "fantastic influx" of people from all over Canada and he had no doubt this was due to B.C.'s climate and healthy economy.

At the same time, he said he was sure there had not actually been a drop in the number of jobs held in the province.

GOVERNMEN

The movement of workers to B.C. is also shown by the government figures. The total Canadian work force increased by 1.2 per cent between February and March to 8,658,000. In B.C., the work force went up 3.13 per cent to 955,000 — and increase of 29,000.

Over the one-year period ending in March the increase in the Canadian work force was 3.86 per cent, while it was 8.77 per cent in B.C.

Gaglardi said there was a "fantastic influx" of people from all over Canada and he had no doubt this was due to B.C.'s climate and healthy economy.

At the same time, he said he was sure there had not actually been a drop in the number of jobs held in the province.

"In my department alone I've been putting 2,000 people to work a month," he said. He said the job-finding was actually a combined effort by the rehabilitation department and the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, an organization Gaglardi created.

In explaining why he thought the number of jobs remained the same, he said: "That great amount of unemployment is because we're absorbing all of the transients from all over the country."

"They are mostly young people. You see them on the highway — scads of them," he said.

He was asked if he thought the heavy jobless increase indicated the need for new employment plans.

"It's too soon to tell. I think this is just a passing thing. It's been a late spring all over the nation."

Hindle, who is business agent in Victoria for the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, said:

"I'm very concerned with this cancer in Canada called unemployment. As a guy who has a fair number of unemployed people in his office day in and day out, I can say they definitely are not all transients.

"A great many of them are Victoria people unable to find work in their own city."

The manufacturing industry — the one area that could provide some kind of cure for unemployment — is too small in Victoria to be of any help, Hindle said.

Where B.C. is concerned, he thinks there is some justification in blaming the situation partly on the influx of outsiders. But it is part of an overall situation that has been affected by national policy and U.S. trade policy, he said.

"It looks like business is waiting for the word go — right across the country. Businessmen are unsure of what to expect. There is an uncertainty in the land right now. This is what I gather from the businessmen I've talked to."

Hindle said his own union local, which depends heavily on the uncertain shipbuilding industry, had 36 per cent of its members out of work last month.

The local has a membership of 486, he said.

Men who want to work in Victoria have had to be sent as far away as Fort Nelson and Hindle feels the government should provide some incentive for people to work in the north.

Conservative leader Stanfield was one of those attacking the Trudeau government again for creating unemployment in the first place.

"The country is on a treadmill because the Trudeau government has betrayed the trust of the private sector of the economy, and such a trust can only be restored by a change in government," he said.

Come home in a Three Point Datsun

IT'S ALL YOU REALLY NEED!

1200 2-DOOR SEDAN

The lowest priced Datsun proves the adage: good things come in small packages. Things like economy, utility, safety. Everything for great driving.

Whopping stopping power

Ask any race driver—nothing stops like disc brakes. As a standard safety item Datsun has 'em up front, where most of the braking action is. Simple, efficient pad pressure on the discs resists heat-fade on repeated stops — "squee-gees" off dampness, slush, grime to call a straighter, surer halt in wet or dry. Readily removable pads last long, change in minutes. Matched with twin-shoe rear drums, Datsun's discs are one of its most important safety features.

Rigid weight-watcher

Small cars make lightness a virtue and rigidity a must. Unitized body construction ensures both. We weld Datsun bodies into a one-piece, high tensile capsule. Weight saving is combined with solid protection, maximum space utilization. Structurally secure under intensive crash testing, it's rattle-free after years of driving. No wonder all the great cars are made this way.

Off to a great start

In summer or in winter temperatures a new automatic choke, along with our high-powered starter motor and big 60-ampere hour battery, help fire up your Datsun right now. No matter what the weather, the advanced fuel system resists vapor-lock, too.

Poised all ways

Bumps, pot-holes, ruts — your 1200's suspension tames them all. Independent front struts and semi-elliptic rear leaf springs track straight and smooth. It's the ideal combination for cars this weight and size. The inherent stability makes for safe traveling, plus a sporty kind of handling that puts Datsun at the head of its class. One more bonus — an incredibly tight 26.8 foot turning circle, curb to curb.

Health Plan 'Inadequate'

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Medical Reporter

The B.C. Medical Service Commission, which administers medicare in this province, "is not properly representing the interests of the patient," says a committee of physicians in a report being distributed to members of the B.C. Medical Association.

The committee, chaired by Dr. P. J. Banks of Victoria, states that the MSC's membership should be expanded to include representatives of the public and at least one MLA.

(The commission now consists of chairman G. A. Stewart, G.S. Bryson, who is deputy minister of finance, and Dr. A. M. Johnson of Vancouver, a past president of the BCMA.)

The BCMA committee examined and reported on the direction which might be taken in future negotiations with the government. The present status of negotiations, which appear to be in deadlock, was not among the terms of reference.

Other recommendations of the committee in respect of the Medical Services Commission:

- It should meet on a regular basis with proper attendance of all members.
- There would be more than one representative of the doctors, who is now chosen by the cabinet from a list of names submitted by BCMA.

"At the present time, the Medical Services Commission has no fiscal autonomy, therefore no freedom to negotiate," says the committee.

"We realize that the ultimate decisions just be taken by cabinet and treasury board but we feel that some guidelines should be provided to the enlarged commission and that (it) should be able to recommend to the government their views on such things as fee increases, premium levels, the increase of decrease of benefits, as well as on negotiations with various groups providing service."

As the administrator of medicare, the commission is responsible for disbursements of about $150 million a year, the largest part of which is to private practising physicians.

It also is responsible for the equivalent revenue, which is raised by individual premiums and contributions from federal and provincial governments under the medicare agreement.

The BCMA committee states that physicians' negotiations with government over fees and other facets of medical care delivery likely will be of a recurring nature in the future.

"The old concept of a free profession setting its own fee schedule is no longer relevant," states the report. "The committee feels that the profession can only succeed in negotiations if their case is reasonable, well thought out, backed by facts and able to carry a major section of public opinion along with it."

The report observes that most doctors would prefer to act as a professional group rather than as a union.

"While a union is a rather stronger bargaining agent, we feel that individual members of the profession are not at present prepared to surrender their rights of self-determination to the degree necessary within union-type negotiations.

"It is also felt that we are concerned in these negotiations with a fee schedule, the effects of which are elastic, rather than with total payments, fringe benefits and hours of work."

The committee says it is "unfortunate" that the provincial government has abandoned a system based on price indexes in assigning fee increases.

Striking by Doctors Ethically Repugnant

A special committee of the B.C. Medical Association has told colleagues they would be unwise to resort to strike action in their pursuit of a favorable agreement with government.

"Any withdrawal of services which is accompanied by the provision of emergency services achieves only the disadvantages of a strike without its full effectiveness and a strike without the provision of emergency services would be ethically repugnant and contrary to the traditions of the profession which fortunately will imbue its membership," says the report.

"We therefore feel the government must recognize this responsibility we feel towards our patients and provide us with proper machinery for responsible negotiations without coercion."

The BCMA's directors set up the committee as a result of the "massive unrest felt throughout the profession about the unsatisfactory state of negotiations between the BCMA and the Medical Services Services Commission."

Its terms of reference were to make recommendations on the format for future negotiations, not the status of current negotiations, which have been deadlocked for some time.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Beacon Hill Park Group Will Ramble To Evaluate

Beacon Hill Park Association, led by Victoria park administrator Cliff Bate, will hold a two-hour rambler Friday through Beacon Hill Park to evaluate all changes in the park including cliff erosion and the flow of traffic. The walk will begin at 9:30 a.m. from the wooden steps opposite the tall totem pole, on Dallas road.

Provincial COURT

A 17-year-old Victoria youth was described Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court as being "on the very threshold of that great monster heroin."

The words were spoken by prosecutor Norman Prelypchan shortly before Judge William Ostler sentenced the youth, Michael Eldon Cain of 1045 Queens, to a term of six months definite and eight months indeterminate.

Cain pleaded guilty March 27 to a charge of possession of heroin. Prelypchan said at that time police found Cain lying on a downtown sidewalk and the youth admitted he had "just fixed with a half-cap of heroin" in a nearby washroom.

The incident occurred less than a month after Cain completed parole for a number of break-ins in the Victoria area early last year.

A total term of four months definite and four months indeterminate was ordered by Ostler for Robby Gerald White, 17, of 103 Redfern.

White pleaded guilty March 25 to an Esquimalt charge of breaking and entering and theft laid after tools and a cassette player worth a total of $160 were taken March 24 from the B.C. Service Station at CFB Esquimalt.

Then on April 4, he pleaded guilty to a two-count Victoria charge of breaking and entering and theft. The counts concerned items taken about March 17 from Rail Records, 715 Fort, and about March 20 from McGavin's Toastmaster, 2629 Prior.

Ostler said he will recommend the time be served in a forestry camp.

Penelope Anne Clark, 19, no address known, was sentenced by Ostler to a total of five months in jail followed by a two-year probationary term.

She pleaded guilty March 27 to four Victoria false pretences charges containing two counts of more than $50 and five of less than $50. They resulted from seven bad cheques for which Miss Clark received $269.25 in goods and cash March 8 from Simpsons-Sears.

Tuesday, she pleaded guilty to two Vancouver false-pretences charges containing one count of more than $50, eight of less than $50 and one of attempt. In the Vancouver case, 10 cheques worth a total of $649.89 were presented at The Bay and Woodward's.

Miss Clark was on two years' probation at the time, from 1970 Victoria convictions for similar offences.

□

Shelley Ann Cox, 17, of Duncan, received a suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term after pleading guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $50 — the shoplifting of a $4.50 item April 1 from The Bay.

□

In traffic court, two persons were fined $400 each and given partial four-month driving bans after pleading guilty before Judge E. F. N. Robinson to separate charges of impaired driving in Victoria. They were Leonard Glancy, 43, of 2119 Oak Bay, stopped Feb. 28, and Gordon Parsons, 42, of 836 Vernon, stopped March 18.

□

Gordon Owen, 67, of 2705 Cook, was fined $350 and given a three-month driving ban following a plea of guilty to a charge of impaired driving March 17 in Victoria.

You know the top speed of your car, but do you know the top speed of your tires?

Some cars can go faster than the tires that are on them will safely allow.

Not racing cars or "muscle" cars, but just everyday, ordinary sedans.

This terrifying prospect is a result of the everyday, ordinary driving some people do, and the kind of tires they happen to have.

For instance: If you commute to and from the city each day, and do a lot of constant high speed highway driving and cornering, the wear and tear on your tires (if they're the wrong ones for your kind of driving) can be worse than the wear and tear on you.

The battle of the bulge.

Foremost, is the problem of heat. That bugaboo of all tires.

Each time a tire moves, it flexes. (Squeeze and unsqueeze your hand rapidly. That's just one kind of flexing a tire goes through when it's moving.)

And each time it flexes, friction causes heat build-up in the tire. (Bend a coat hanger back and forth quickly and see how hot it gets.)

The faster you go, the more the heat. The longer you go faster; even more heat.

And if you do a lot of cornering without a tire designed to keep maximum tread on the road, the additional bulging in the sidewall can cause even more heat.

After a while, all this heat builds up, and can cause the tire to start literally "breaking down". The rubber gets soft, and weak. And eventually, the tire just isn't capable of safely performing at highway speeds over a sustained period. Even though your car still is.

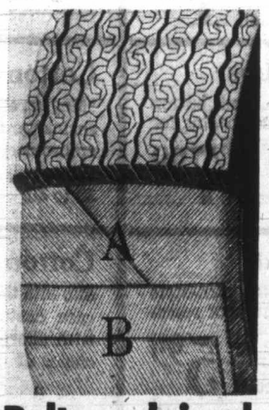
The battleground.

Uniroyal engineers thought long and hard about this problem and created a special tire for the person who does a lot of highway driving.

The Uniroyal Tiger Paw.

It's a belted bias-ply tire, and it's different than a conventional tire in some very significant ways as we'll try to explain if you'll bear with us:

First of all, the "carcass", or foundation of our tire ("A" in the diagram) consists of two full layers or "plies" of nylon running at a carefully engineered bias, or angle to each other. (Thus the term "bias-ply".)



Belts explained.

The precisely fixed angles at which these plies are placed results in minimum flexing when the tire is moving. Which in turn results in a cool-riding tire with low heat build-up.

We use nylon because it's the strongest and the most durable carcass material known. (Which is also why you'll find it in jet plane tires as well as in "Indy" race car tires.)

Now the belts. (They're "B" in the diagram.)

We have two tough rayon belts that are bonded to the plies and run around the centre of the whole tire.

Much like a girdle which holds a woman in at the waist, so do belts keep the tire firm and prevent it from distorting at speed.

As well, they fight the tendency ordinary tires have to "lift" when cornering by keeping more tread flat on the road.

The less a tire distorts and squirms, the less heat is built up.

And the less the chances of tire strain leading to breakdown and failure.

What about mileage?

Once again, Tiger Paws deliver. Since the belts minimize the tire squirming on the road, less rubber scrubs off the tread. That, coupled with our extra deep tread grooves gives you extra increased mileage over conventional tires.

Safety. Performance. Mileage.

If you happen to do the kind of driving we've been talking about, maybe you need the kind of tire we've been talking about.

Tiger Paws start at about $34.*

Hero Named In Tax Fraud

NEWARK, N.J.—Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, a Second World War hero and seven-term Democratic congressman, has been charged with tax evasion, perjury, and helping two former Jersey city officials, now in jail, to conceal their incomes and evade taxes.

Gallagher was not available for comment but in grand jury testimony filed with the indictment he denied any wrongdoing. He was scheduled to be arraigned here April 21 on the seven-count federal indictment.

A federal grand jury charged Gallagher, 51, with perjury for testifying that $534,000 worth of bearer bonds he bought from 1960 through 1967 were for the local Democratic party when they actually were for himself.

The conspiracy counts charged that Gallagher received a total of $326,000 in cash from Thomas M. Flaherty, former Jersey City council president, and used phony initials, names and symbols to convert it into bonds which he turned over to Flaherty and former Jersey City mayor Thomas J. Whelan, who stashed them along with another $700,000 in secret, numbered bank accounts in Florida.

Hollywood Park Racing Season Underway Today

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A new contract for nearly 1000 racetrack workers was signed in time for Hollywood Park to open its 75-day 1972 thoroughbred racing season today with the $45,700 Premiere Handicap.

Agreement was reached late Monday night on the contract which provides wage-and-fringe benefit increases of about 6.2 per cent, spokesmen said.

Twelve thoroughbreds are scheduled to run in the six-furlong Premiere, five of them winners of add-money events during the recent Santa Anita meeting.

WESTERN DEBUT

The Premiere has lured Kennedy Road, Canada's champion three-year-old of 1971, owned by Mrs. Art Stollery of Toronto. He will be making his western debut with another Canadian champion, jockey Sandy Hawley, in the saddle.

Indian Hill Stable and Marshall's Single Agent could be the favorite. The thoroughbred was a four-length winner of the $34,700 San Simeon Handicap in his last start. Howard Grant rides this gelding who must carry the high weight of 124 pounds. Kennedy Road will carry 119 pounds.

$2.5 Million t

Offer Hailed

Premier Bennett's offer Tuesday of $2.5 million in provincial funds toward a Victoria convention centre "is a delight and a challenge" to organizers of the Pacific Centre Foundation.

Allan Purdy, acting chairman of the foundation, said Tuesday that Bennett's offer puts the hopes of the group "six months ahead of schedule."

The foundation aims at reaction in Victoria, hopefully in the Crystal Garden building, of a civic centre that will meet both the cultural and convention needs of the region — a region which its members see extending at least as far as Nanaimo.

Without Debt

Bennett said he wants the long-awaited centre built "fortwith" and "without debt" to create jobs and provide the Victoria area with a necessary facility.

The province, he said, will pay one-third of the cost of construction up to a maximum of $2.5 million if the city puts up one-third of the cost plus the land and private enterprise and "individuals" put up the remainder.

Purdy, who said a favorable ear had been given the foundation by Victoria officials in its bid to acquire the Crystal Garden, saw the premier's offer as a "challenge" to the foundation, not as a possible new burden on city taxpayers.

Seek Balance

With a start like this, Purdy felt it was squarely up to the foundation to go after the balance, through grants or donations from areas that would benefit, from individuals, and through fund-raising drives.

"I feel," said Purdy, "that the premier is in sympathy with our goal, and that it is

There isn't much you can buy for a penny these days and soon, there may be less.

Victoria's traffic engineer Dave Campbell says he will recommend to city council that the use of pennies in parking meters be abolished.

Campbell says "pennies are a pain in the neck." Last month, more than 360 meters were jammed, most as a result of bent pennies.

"There is also the problem of winding the clockwork of meters which must be done by hand. If you throw in a dime, you activate the mechanism only once; if you use 10 pennies instead, you activate it 10 times," Campbell said in an interview Tuesday.

Some meters, he said, must be wound up three times a week.

Without Debt

Bennett said he wants the long-awaited centre built "fortwith" and "without debt" to create jobs and provide the Victoria area with a necessary facility.

The province, he said, will pay one-third of the cost of construction up to a maximum of $2.5 million if the city puts up one-third of the cost plus the land and private enterprise and "individuals" put up the remainder.

Purdy, who said a favorable ear had been given the foundation by Victoria officials in its bid to acquire the Crystal Garden, saw the premier's offer as a "challenge" to the foundation, not as a possible new burden on city taxpayers.

Seek Balance

With a start like this, Purdy felt it was squarely up to the foundation to go after the balance, through grants or donations from areas that would benefit, from individuals, and through fund-raising drives.

"I feel," said Purdy, "that the premier is in sympathy with our goal, and that it is now up to us to pick up his challenge."

But Victoria municipal officials were skeptical Tuesday about the offer.

Aldermen commended the premier for his "good intentions" but pointed out that the terms of the offer were unacceptable to the city.

Can't Pay

They agreed that Victoria should have a convention centre but said that the city's financial share of such a project couldn't be paid out of current revenue, which Bennett said he meant by saying the centre should be built "without debt."

Bennett, asked for clarification, said the city could finance its share of the centre over a long period but the debt could not be charged against the centre's operation.

He also said he would consider a federal contribution as part of the municipality's one-third share.

Since Bennett used the term "convention centre," he was asked if he was precluding cultural facilities for the centre. He replied: "I don't want to be narrow on that point" — but he made it clear the cultural uses would be in addition to the basic tourist facility. If cultural facilities could be included in the total cost, he would go along with it.

In his original announcement, made in a telephone call to the legislative press gallery, Bennett said it was the government's opinion that a "convention centre and auditorium" should be built now.

No Land

Bennett made it clear the city's $2.5 million share would not include the value of the land which he said he understood was already available for a convention centre.

He wanted, he said, to encourage Victoria to move ahead with the project "forthwith" and described his cost-sharing offer as a continuation of the government's efforts to create jobs.

Mayor Peter Pollen and convention centre co-ordinator Ald. Clyde Savage were out of town Tuesday and unavailable for comment.

15 Mills

Ald. Ove Witt, chairman of council's recreation committee, said he was extremely pleased by the premier's offer, but the city should deal with it very cautiously.

"Under no circumstances should the city's taxpayers be burdened with the financial implications of building a convention centre. To pay the city's share out of the current budget is not possible. That would mean a mill rate increase of at least 15 mills," he said.

"We also have to consider the question of losses and revenue. Are the city's taxpayers expected to pick up possible losses? Who will administer the centre?" Witt asked.

Possible Site

The old Crystal Garden, he said, would be a possible site for a convention centre but council would have to decide that.

"We should also look at other sites. Maybe across from the city hall, or the two acres at Fishermen's Wharf on Dallas Road."

Ald. Percy Frampton also discounted the possibility of paying the city's share out of current expenditures.

He suggested that the city approach the federal government for funds to build the convention centre. As far as he knew, Bennett said that federal grants would be considered part of the city's one-third contribution.

There was also the question of how to get private enterprise to come up with its one-third share.

The other possibility, Frampton said, was to build a smaller convention centre "for about $2 million." the Crystal Garden site, which had an estimated value of $750,000, would be used as the city's share. Frampson doubted, however, that the premier would go along with that.

Automobile Throws A Tandem

Big double pair of wheels went their own way in Saanich Tuesday afternoon after collision between gravel truck and car. Saanich police said westbound car slammed into rear wheels of eastbound truck on Trans-Canada Highway at Wilkinson, knocking off wheels. Both vehicles came to rest in ditch. Michael Patrick Kelly, 40, of 187 Virago Crescent, Colwood, driver of car was in fair condition Tuesday in Queen Victoria Hospital with broken leg, cuts received in crash, hospital authorities reported. Truck driver Robert Adrian, 32, of 5194 Lochside, Saanich, was unhurt.

Central Saanich Family

Fourth To Die

A 21-year-old man who was killed when his car flipped into a ditch near Shawnigan Lake late Monday night became the fourth member of a Central Saanich family to die in a traffic mishap this year.

Dead is Roderick Allan Clifford, of Stelly's Cross Road, Central Saanich. A woman passenger, Cathy Harvey of Campbell River, was uninjured.

On Feb. 25, Clifford's mother, father and a sister also of Stelly's Cross Road, were killed in a car-truck accident on the Cariboo Highway, 20 miles south of Williams Lake.

Killed in the mishap were Joseph Clifford, 47, a company director of Hayward's Funeral Chapel, his wife, Florence, 46, and a daughter, Valerie Dawn, 15. The father was driver of the car.

The Monday night mishap, Shawnigan Lake RCMP reported, occurred about 11:15 p.m. on the Shawnigan Lake-Mill Bay Road.

Survivors of the Joseph Clifford family are four sons and one daughter ranging from five to 23 years old, spokesmen close to the family said Tuesday night.

View Royal School Dispute

Sewer Link Newest Proposal

Yet another possible solution to the long-standing problem of sewage disposal at View Royal elementary school was proposed to Greater Victoria school board's construction and maintenance committee Tuesday.

The new recommendation was brought forward by construction officials of the board because they felt the Pollution Control Board would not approve the board's last solution to the problem — installation of a self-contained secondary treatment plant at the school.

The new proposal is for sewage from the school to first be treated in a septic tank and then go in liquid form to a holding tank.

A plastic pipe would lead from the holding tank to the nearest Capital Regional Board sewer near Shoreline school, and the sewage would be pumped through the pipe into the sewer.

In the end the committee referred the whole matter back to the department officials for a final recommendation next month.

At the moment the board is using the septic tank at the school as a holding tank which is pumped out regularly at a cost of about $90 a week.

It had to take this step to prevent the school from being closed down because of inadequate septic tank facilities which were causing effluent to leak into the school fields and a nearby ditch and creek.

But the holding tank is only a temporary measure. The Greater Victoria health board has given the school trustees until the end of June to find an acceptable long-term solution to the problem.

Possible cost of the newest proposal would be about $4,500, the committee was told.

Sig Dietze, construction and maintenance supervisor, said the pipe would not have to be a large one, so little digging would have to be done to accommodate it. Neither would the pump have to be very large or expensive.

The pipe could probably run down the railway right-of-way behind the school and cut through at a railway culvert, he said.

The health board has said that before a secondary trestment plant could be approved, the Pollution Control Board would have to approve because some effluent would still be discharged into the creek.

The PCB is not likely to approve any such discharge of effluent, even if it is treated, Dietze said.

Trustee Hal Knight said he hoped that when the staff was reviewing the situation during the next month, they would also consider the possibility of improving the drainage system and still using a septic tank system.

Septic tanks, if efficiently used, were the best way ecologically to dispose of sewage,

Team of Doctors Battle To Save Youth's Foot

A team of three doctors spent most of Tuesday afternoon in an attempt to save a 17-year-old Victoria youth's right foot after an unusual accident during the noon hour at Oakland Industries, 1306 Wharf.

The doctors had not indicated late Tuesday whether the foot of Mark Christopher Shore, 927 Collinson, could be saved.

Shore was injured as he went through a 36-inch-square opening of the Oakland Industries ice room to resume work shovelling ice onto a worm conveyor which was taking it to a docked fishboat for use at sea.

Police said ice had built up near the opening and Shore's boot slipped on the ice. The opening also is used for the conveyor, which has sharp edges, and Shore slipped into it.

The edges sliced through the boot and most of Shore's leg just above the ankle.

Fellow workman Ron Olding, 24, of 355 Kindersley, turned off the conveyor while Donald Ruttan, 24, of 96 Sims, phoned for help and then returned to reverse the machine's gears and pull Shore's foot free.

A Garden City Ambulance crew of Larry Tuttle and Neil Leard, first on the scene, gave Shore emergency treatment and took him to Queen Victoria Hospital, arriving at 12:45. Police estimated the time between the accident and hospital arrival at less than 15 minutes.

School Addition Bid Approved

Approval of a tender by W. Campbell Ltd., Saanich, of $204,986 for additions to Belmont senior high school was given Tuesday night by Sooke school trustees, subject to approval of the education department.

This approval, said superintendent E. E. Hyndman, was expected daily and trustees were advised that the contractor was prepared to start work immediately.

Also approved, on recommendation of the department, was the bid of Herb Bate Construction Ltd. of $6,264 for surface and sub-surface drainage at Wishart elementary school.

About 58 pupils from Grades 3 and 4 of Millstream elementary school will spend most of a week in June at Moorcroft Camp, a United Church of Canada site, near Parksville.

Approval was given in answer to a letter from H. I. Banks, Millstream principal, in which he said two teachers on his staff had requested that they be allowed to take the children.

All will be housed in cottages, with a leader to each and volunteer parents will take care of transportation as well as serving as cooks, hut leaders and a nurse.

The students will leave Tuesday morning, June 13, and return to the school Friday afternoon, June 16.

Victoria Engineer Cites Cost

Penny Meters Out?

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

There isn't much you can buy for a penny these days and soon, there may be less.

Victoria's traffic engineer Dave Campbell says he will recommend to city council that the use of pennies in parking meters be abolished.

Campbell says "pennies are a pain in the neck." Last month, more than 360 meters were jammed, most as a result of bent pennies.

"There is also the problem of winding the clockwork of meters which must be done by hand. If you throw in a dime, you activate the mechanism only once; if you use 10 pennies instead, you activate it 10 times," Campbell said in an interview Tuesday.

Some meters, he said, must be wound up three times a week. It just wasn't economically justifiable anymore to continue the use of pennies.

"We are one of the last major cities in North America to hold on to the pennies for our parking meters. We should get rid of them fast."

Meanwhile, city hall is stuck with mountains of pennies.

"Since the first meters were installed in 1947, motorists have deposited $3,288,482.48," said Mason Sheldrick, the city's assistant comptroller.

Most of that has been pennies — an estimated 280 million of them.

In 1971 alone, more than eight million coins were fed into parking meters for a total of $202,030.68. More than six million were pennies.

On an average day, the city's 1,671 parking meters swallow about 40,000 coins. Maintenance men bring the daily haul of about $450 to the accounting department in seven bags.

The coins are poured into a tray which is connected to the sorting machine. An employee keeps a sharp lookout for fake coins or washers, sometimes used to get free parking.

The machine neatly separates the pennies from the nickels and dimes, each flowing into bags mounted under the machine.

From there, the separated coins are put into a packaging machine. And a roll of coins is turned out every four seconds.

"In terms of coins, we outroll any other establishment in the city," said Sheldrick. Some parking garages may end up with more money, though, because they take in a lot of quarters.

The finished rolls go into bags which are sealed for deposit at the bank.

And then, the whole process begins again. The coins are circulated to the public which uses them for parking meters; the meters are emptied, the coins sorted, packaged and delivered to the bank.

City officials have always been eager to point out that the main purpose of parking meters is to regulate traffic and facilitate a turnover in parkers.

But with more than $3 million collected in the past 25 years, it is difficult to deny the value of parking meters as revenue producers.

'Wonderful To Be Alive'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Tami Hogan was a bright nine-year-old who always showed her parents her school work.

Except one item.

It was a crayon illustrated poem called Thank You For Life that she wrote herself. It said:

"Thank you Lord for letting me be alive today.
"I like to try to help in many ways,
"Thank you for my family,
"I like you for my family,
"We do live quite happily,
"We always play together,
"Oh, Thank you for the sunshine weather,
"It's just wonderful to be alive!"

Tami's father, Gary, a lieutenant with the suburban Carmichael fire department, said he and his wife found the poem the day after his little girl died last Thursday of leukemia.

"My wife looked in a folder, and there was this poem right on top. We've never seen it before. I wonder if she planned it that way."

Her father said he found out in December, 1970, that Tami had the deadly disease.

"We never told her that she had leukemia because we always hoped she'd be home well again," Hogan said. "We just told her it was an infection."

Tami's teacher, Sister Mary Carton of Our Lady of the Assumption school, said the little girl knew something was wrong.

"She said once she wished she could have just one day when she didn't feel sick."

They were married April 14, 1912, in Bristol, England, and came to Saskatoon same month. They moved to Victoria in April, 1947. Girl Delinquency Rate Rising On Double, Says U.S. Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Juvenile delinquency in the United States among girls aged 10 to 17 rose twice as fast as crime involving boys from 1960 to 1970, a U.S. government crime report said Tuesday. It blamed the "more aggressive . . . more independent" behavior of girls.

In 1970, the report said juvenile courts for the first time handled more than one million cases involving boys and girls. Courts in rural areas showed a 13 per cent increase over the previous year and courts in cities and suburbs reported 6 per cent increases.

But the health, education and welfare department study said the rate of increase in delinquency cases slowed for the first time in five years.

"The rise in girl's delinquency has generally been attributed to their changing attitude towards society and society's changing attitude towards them," the report said.

"Instead of the passive role assumed by girls in the past and society's protective role towards them, girls are becoming more aggressive and more independent in their day-to-day activities."

The report said that although delinquency is still primarily a boy's problem, the boy-to-girl ratio of court referrals narrowed from 4-1 in mid-1960s to 3-1 in 1970.

For the period covered by the study, girls' court cases showed a one-year increase of 7 per cent in suburbs, 11 per cent in cities and 20 per cent in rural areas for a national increase of 10 per cent. Boys' cases increased 5 per cent. The population growth of children aged 10 to 17 during the period was 2 per cent.

Administration officials emphasized that the rate of increase in juvenile court cases declined for the first time in five years. Each year since 1965, the percentage increase in cases was higher than the previous year, but in 1970 it was only 6 per cent compared with a 10 per cent rise in 1969, the report said.

"The statistics are very significant, for we may be nearing an end to the growth in juvenile delinquency that has plagued the nation for so long," Jerris Leonard, administrator of the law enforcement assistance administration, said in a statement.

"Nationally, crime has been increasing, but its rate of growth has slowed. Now that a similar pattern is emerging for delinquency, we may be coming near the point where crime and delinquency will cease to grow and then will actually begin to dip."

Birds of Feather Fouled Together

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — What is a typo? It's when a word supposed to be spelled one way turns up in print anotyer wya. Like that!

Such was the case when writer Natalie Kelly correctly spelled the names of 50 birds, but as Foster's Daily Democrat said, "this is what we did:

"Turned a great cormorant into a great cornernut; called the horned grebe a hoone grebe; impolitely treated the common goldeneye as a common goldemaye; indiscreetly slandered the surf scoter and the common scoter, calling them the surf seater and common sector; injudiciously maligned the common grackle as the common crackle; and just plain miserably termed the house sparrow the mouse sparrow."

Degree Offered

Director of the National Gallery of Canada in Ottawa, Jean Sutherland Boggs, will be given honorary degree at University of Victoria's May 27 convocation. Miss Boggs, fifth director of the gallery since its inception in 1881, has five honorary degrees besides her doctorate, which she received from Radcliffe in 1953. She taught art history at University of California and was curator at Toronto Art Gallery before assuming directorship of National Gallery in 1966.

Draft Seen in U.S.

Combat for Women?

NEW YORK (AP) — If a woman can carry a baby, the groceries or the office files, can she carry a rifle in combat as well?

Women's fitness for the battlefield comes up for new debate now that an amendment to the United States constitution granting women equal rights has been passed by Congress. If ratified by 38 states, it will make women subject to the military draft and possibly combat duty.

The official military position is a cautious one. In a recent statement, Brig.-Gen. Mildred Bailey, director of the U.S. Women's Army Corps, declined to speculate on what combat duties women in the army might be assigned.

"However, I am sure that the army would be guided by the same fundamental policy that it now uses in assignment of duties to men, which is that duties assigned must be commensurate with each individual's physical and mental capacity," said Bailey.

Privately, some male soldiers say they'd really rather let the men throw thhe grenades and build the bunkers.

Some psychiatrists, however, see no reason why women, simply because they fare female, can't be trained to kill.

"Women don't take to killing comfortably, but then no one really does," says Dr. Leon Salzman, a clinical professor of psychiatry at the Albert Einstein medical school in New York. "I think women would make very effective killers if they get the same kind of training our Vietnam soldiers do.

"I have never believed that women by their nature are softer or more sentimental. It really is a matter of cultural training. Women could be trained just like men to despise and kill the enemy."

Professional soldiers argue that women simply haven't the physical strength for enduring 60 days in the field with 90 pound packs on their backs. Salzman agrees, but adds, "Most modern weaponry requires simply pressing a button. Women have proved to be fine marksmen and have good co-ordination. They also seem less distraught at the sight of blood."

Dr. Estelle Ramey, a professor of physiology and biophysics at the Georgetown University school of medicine, agrees that women could be capable of combat duty.

"Women have proved to be better able than men to survive chronic psychological stress. And history shows that in defending themselves, women can fight like tigers. Everyone recognizes that a mother trying to protect her child can be as vicious as need be."

Throughout the world in history, women have fought bravely alongside men.

Joan of Arc rallied the French against the English and raised the siege of Orleans in 1429.

In the 16th century, Kenau Hasselaer, Holland's greatest female soldier, held out her band of women fighters against 30,000 Spaniards.

Augustina Domonech, the Maid of Saragossa, a Spanish heroine, was immortalized by Lord Byron in Childe Harold's Pilgrimage.

Today, Viet Cong women have been known to lead companies in battle. Women in Ireland are learning the guerrilla tactics of the IRA. And in Israel, though women are not usually sent into combat, many female soldiers have seen more than their share of the fighting.

Money Goes Under Wraps

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The hemlines went up first. Now the underwear goes trendy.

Beginning May 1, the military command said Tuesday, girls serving in the Israeli armed forces would be allowed to dispense with military-issued undergarments and buy bras and panties of their own choosing instead.

A military communique said the girls would be given a $12 allowance for this purpose.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our biology teacher made a statement yesterday that sounded very strange to say the least. He said if it was absolutely necessary, a father could nurse his children. A few of us told him we couldn't understand how this was possible. He assured us it could be done. Is he right?—Curious At Mt. Abe.

Dear Curious: Dr. Rodney Jamieson, Chicago internist and staff member of Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital is medical authority for the following statement: "No way. Unless the father holds the bottle."

□

Dear Ann Landers: You often have pointers in your column on how to be a better wife, husband, mother-in-law, neighor, or friend. I have never seen any helpful hints on how to be a better boss. I've never been a boss, but I have been a secretary for 18 years and I'd like to make a few suggestions.

● It costs nothing to say "good morning" when you come in and "good evening" when you leave. Just acknowledging your secretary's existence will help her feel she is something more than a walking typewriter.

● When your secretary tells you she cannot read your handwriting, try not to make any cracks about her eyesight. Next time she might not ask what you meant. She'll just put it down the way it looks — and you'll be sorry.

● You married your wife, your secretary didn't marry her. It's a wife's duty to shop for family gifts, write party invitations and thank-you notes.

● If your secretary makes a mistake, wait until you can inform her privately. Don't correct or castigate her in the presence of other executives or worse yet, in front of other secretaries. A good boss is also a gentleman. Sign me —Chicago.

Dear Chi: Here's your letter. As a boss who employs 11 secretaries I took a good, hard look at your suggestions and I see one I might learn from. Thank you.

□

Dear Ann Landers: I notice a lot of people write to you about things that aren't really problems. They just need to know how to handle a clumsy situation. Maybe you can help me as you've helped others.

I work in a parking lot. Part of my duties include cashiering. I always count the customers's change out loud when I hand it back — and then I say a cheerful "Thank you!" Some of my customers reply, "You're welcome." Others say, "Thank YOU . . ." in a higher voice on YOU — as if to say, "You are the one who should be thanked."

My parking lot is self-serve and self-lock. The customer does everything. All I do is take the money. I feel I should not be thanked for enjoying their business. I should thank THEM. If someone says, "Thank YOU" should I respond with, "No — THANK YOU." — Ron.

Dear R.: If a customer wants to thank you — let him. Three thank yous in the space of three seconds is one too many.

What a delicious way to begin the day.

LOS ANGELES — The living room is quiet except for the gentle voice with the old world accent and the tick of a pendulum clock.

"One of the most vivid memories of my childhood was of a movie I saw at school," says Dr. Lawrence Friedman, his blue eyes gazing past the paneled walls across time and space.

"It was The Crucifixion. When it was over, the other boys looked at me and called me 'Christ killer.' "

Today in his Los Angeles home, surrounded by his library, a Chinese art collection, musical instruments and pictures of his family, Friedman is a long way from the days when he was the only Jewish boy in a Catholic school in Budapest. But, he remembers . . . and as a psychoanalyst, he has come to understand.

"All people are prejudiced," he says. "Blacks, Jews, intellectuals, they all think they are the chosen ones.

"Prejudice is human nature. We reject in others what we cannot accept in ourselves. But, we should not harm others because of it.

"It is all right to feel prejudiced, but it is not all right to take action because of it."

Friedman calls the distinction bewteen thought and deed a major concept in psychoanalysis, a method of treatment for mental disturbances developed more than 60 years ago by Sigmund Freud.

Freud practiced in Vienna, but with the rise of Nazism many of his followers, like Friedman, came to the United States.

Adviser Must Know Human Emotions

By DON GAIN
Colonist Reporter

Some people learn from their parents how to form healthy relationships with other people, "but not many of us do," Dr. Margaret McHugh told a meeting Monday night of the Greater Victoria Citizens Counselling Centre in Metropolitan United Church Annex.

Mrs. McHugh, counselling psychologist with the education department at the University of Victoria, was speaking to a group concerned with counselling and she talked about developing a helping relationship with the person being counselled.

But she said the essential aspects also apply in relationships such as husband-wife, teacher-student, doctor-patient, minister-parishioner, friend and friend.

The psychologist took the role of someone coming to ask for help. She said the counsellor would have to be aware of himself or herself and of the whole gamut of human emotions — apprehension, fear, irritation, frustration, anger, jealousy, tenderness, caring, love, ecstacy, pain and hurt.

The counsellor would also have had, at some time, to have experienced and felt confusion and ambiguity, she said.

"And also what it means to be so open and so exposed to someone else that you are vulnerable to being hurt one more time.

"If you have experienced these feelings, you can provide me (as the person being counselled) a place where I can begin to relate to other people."

Many persons have disquieting thoughts much of the time and when they shut down on their own feelings, they shut down on other people, the psychologist said.

"You have to be able to accept your own feelings, recognize them as what they are and to be ready to own them as part of your self, your experience and your existence."

If a person can share his feelings with someone who is important in his life, he has gone a long way toward a healthy relationship, Mrs. McHugh said.

"And I sincerely believe that this is a life-long process. It isn't just something you learn to do once and then forget about."

Understanding, honesty and directness are important in counselling, the psychologist stressed.

"Openess to yourself, to your own feelings, being willing to experience them, then being open" to the person being counselled.

"Honest to yourself. If you are honest yourself about what you're thinking and feeling, you can give a clear message.

If you're not honest" with the other person, then you won't be in close touch. "If you can be direct . . . not coy, not beating around the bush, but telling me how it is with me, then I will be able to trust you."

The final session of the winter series of meetings of the centre will be held in the church annex at 7:30 p.m. next Monday.

When Will You Start Family?

By Katharine Whitehorn
Colonist London Observer Service

Not you, of course. You think before you speak, you do. Of course you wouldn't make a nasty remark about someone else's game leg; what an idea. And naturally you're dead against pollution and very concerned about the future of the planet.

So it isn't you that's been going around saying, "When are you going to start a family?" "Isn't your daughter expecting yet?" "Don't want to leave it too long, you know." Or even, in that very careful tone which isn't much more obvious than an elephant falling through a fourth-floor skylight — "Are you going to have children, do you think?"

Still, plenty of people have been saying these things — even to a girl I know who is still in her 20s, has only been married four years and, with dodgy health and a husband about to change jobs, has excellent reasons for waiting. And I bet half of them aren't remotely conscious of being even tactless, let alone anti-social.

Which just means they haven't thought about it.

Question Needles Couples

Three States

Any married couple without children is in one of three states.

- They're trying to produce some and can't, in which case these needling little questions are about as kindly as asking a cripple why he isn't running in the next track meet. Or:
- They're undecided. If so, enough of such snide cracks just might push them into it — thus distorting a decision people surely ought to make with their eyes open, and maybe leaving one of them feeling they were bounced into it all too soon. Or:
- They actually don't want any children. In which case, what the hell do these maternal ladies think they're doing?

We have masses of TV and newspaper space devoted to the population problem; not a soul but thinks we have to do something about it; if ever there's to be a family of more than 1.2 again somebody's got to lay off, to right the balance.

But what hope do we have of ever curbing the world's fertility at all, if even in the educated sections of an advanced country a woman can't abstain without being made to feel a freak?

Common Topic

And that's exactly what such chat can do. I remember trying to get a group of rather shy women from Kenya talking and the great common topic turned out to be babies; after two hours of "when my seventh was weaned, I . . ." and "You had a dreadful time with your fifth, didn't you?" I felt positively empty.

People might be a little less glib in their recommendations, I think, if they took a closer look at their real motives for making these cracks.

For it's not, I'm convinced, that they're really so upset at the thought of their dear friends missing out on the blessings of motherhood; on the contrary; who's she, your primeval subconscious is saying to you, to get out of being chained to the house for weeks on end — up in the night with bottles and ear-oil.

They're giving up trips to the hairdresser for the sake of trips to the zoo?

And if the childless couple isn't quite so hard up as everybody else because of it, then heaven help them. I know a successful novelist who is childless because years ago she conceived in the Fallopian tube and was very lucky not to die of it. For 25 years she's had to put up with people saying she has "chosen material success" instead of self-sacrificing parenthood.

Cosy Chat

And everybody had darned well better know how self-sacrificing they are, these mothers. A pregnant friend of mine squeezed behind the lunch table the other day for a cosy chat about the forthcoming event; she said the trouble with pregnancy was not so much the morning sickness, or being unable to get through turnstiles, but the advice you had to endure.

She was amazed at the just-you-wait attitude of so many women, who told her to wash her own nappies with her own hands lest they be not white enough, how they dwelt gloatingly on the loss of freedom; "And all these fantastic little booties and bonnets and things — are they really necessary?

Well, of course not; but how can you say in later life, After All I've Done for You, unless you've always been clearly prepared to fuss, fuss and fuss again?

Almost all the really nasty tribal rituals concerned with reproduction, like slicing off a girl's genitalia in Somililand or making a baby catch its death "waiting naked for God" and Breton christenings, are enforced not by male chauvinist pigs but by female chauvinist sows who don't see why these young girls whould get away with having an easier time than they had.

Masochistic Streak

There's a strong masochistic streak in women which makes them feel, not only that the common lot of women is pretty bloody, but that it somehow ought to be.

The family planners are puzzled that today's young woman, far from spacing her family as was the original idea, gives birth like a pop-up toaster. Is she trying to get it all over in one fell swoop (which doesn't suggest she enjoys it all that much) or subconsciously feeling that if you don't suffer like a hag-ridden Victorian, you aren't really doing your stuff?

Perhaps what we should do is ta play up the frightfulness of the working life, chained to a hot typewriter all day — changing the boss's paper napkins almost hourly — pushing the car for miles because of the noise it's making, just like a yowling pramful.

For if we could once get rid, (however wrongly) of the idea that you can actually have a good, good life without children, then — just possibly — the good women would leave alone those very, very few who are not contributing to the population problem.

Analyst Sees Love, Hate Co-exist

'All People Are Prejudiced'

By VICTORIA BILLINGS
Colonist-Copley Service

LOS ANGELES — The living room is quiet except for the gentle voice with the old world accent and the tick of a pendulum clock.

"One of the most vivid memories of my childhood was of a movie I saw at school," says Dr. Lawrence Friedman, his blue eyes gazing past the paneled walls across time and space.

"It was The Crucifixion. When it was over, the other boys looked at me and called me 'Christ killer.' "

Today in his Los Angeles home, surrounded by his library, a Chinese art collection, musical instruments and pictures of his family, Friedman is a long way from the days when he was the only Jewish boy in a Catholic school in Budapest. But, he remembers . . . and as a psychoanalyst, he has come to understand.

"All people are prejudiced," he says. "Blacks, Jews, intellectuals, they all think they are the chosen ones.

"Prejudice is human nature. We reject in others what we cannot accept in ourselves. But, we should not harm others because of it.

"It is all right to feel prejudiced, but it is not all right to take action because of it."

Friedman calls the distinction bewtween thought and deed a major concept in psychoanalysis, a method of treatment for mental disturbances developed more than 60 years ago by Sigmund Freud.

Freud practiced in Vienna, but with the rise of Nazism many of his followers, like Friedman, came to the United States.

The influence of psychoanalysis grew during the Second World War and by the 1950s, being psychoanalyzed was a fad.

Psychoanalytic terms like "repression" and "regression" found their way into common conversation.

Today no more than 3,000 U.S. medical doctors have taken the involved analytic training, following a residency in psychiatry, which is required to become a member of the American Psychoanalytic Society. And less than 25,000 Americans are their patients.

Doctor 'Hates' Illness

But analysts still exert significant influence on the mental heath field. They and their ideas are employed in the training of psychiatrists, clinical psychologists, psychiatric social workers and pastoral and marriage counselors.

Friedman, a senior faculty member of the Los Angeles Psychoanalytic Society and Institute and a member of the American Psychoanalytic Association, said his own interest in psychoanalysis began when he was in Vienna.

"I became a doctor because I hate illness, a psychoanalyst because I hate emotional illness more than any other. It is the source of more suffering . . .," he says in the introduction to his latest book.

Called How Much Pleasure? How Much Pain? it is a travel story which takes the reader through Europe and the life of a sensitive, intelligent and compassionate man.

It traces his remembrances as he revisits places where he spent his youth. The memories are sometimes sweet, sometimes sad, as those of any Jew who lived in Nazi Europe. But, they are also tempered with compassion and understanding.

"I did not suffer alone, and persecution never created resentment in me," says Friedman. "Life is full of misery, but we still can appreciate a flower, even if it will die tomorrow."

He left Germany in 1935, but not before he was beaten and harassed by anti-Semites. "They told me I would have to leave the hospital where I worked because they wanted to convert my room into a chapel," Friedman says with an ironic smile.

Fortunately, he had obtained a ticket on a ship going to America. He expected his fiancee, Marianne, to follow soon after, but was in the United States three years before he could secure the necessary papers. She left Vienna with a few possessions and $8 in cash the week Germany annexed Austria. They were married when she arrived in Los Angeles after a 35-day boat trip.

In his book, Friedman tells stories of friends and relatives who were not so lucky. Each stop in his return journey loosens old feelings.

"In writing, I tried to describe how love and hate can exist in one person at the same time," the analyst explains.

"Each of us has the power to love or hate, create or destroy. Today we have the means to blast a road into a mountain or send people to eternity."

Why does psychoanalysis paint such a dark side of man?

"If we ignore our destructive impulses, how can we control them?" he asks.

The analyst says he objects to the trend today to "here and now" thereapy, which stresses reconditioning the individual's behavior instead of probing his thoughts.

"People don't function that way," he says. "We can influence a person's actions, but we cannot control his feelings and thoughts. Eventually, inner conflicts will surface again in actions. Psychoanalysis helps people to understand their thoughts and feelings so they can control their actions."

Women's Liberation Overdue

The social significance of psychoanalysis goes beyond treatment of individual patients, according to Freidman, who can list among his other books Psychoanalysis: Uses and Abuses.

"Psychoanalysis is a valuable tool for anyone who works with human beings," he says.

He gives his psychoanalytic viewpoint of the sexual revolution. "People think that doing something they didn't do before is freedom, but it is the attitude with which it is done that counts. There is no sexual freedom when a woman is still called a 'broad,' when people are still too ashamed to report venereal disease and when teenagers become pregnant because they don't practise birth control."

Friedman says that the women's liberation movement is "long overdue.

"People make fun of women's liberationists now, just as they did the suffragettes," he says, "but their actions will have far-reaching consequences, and many of their complaints are valid.

"Women have been enslaved in our civilization. Men are stronger and could dominate them. They have also been idealized, but it is only to cover up the hostility men feel toward them.

"Women are even joked about. We laugh about stupid mothers-in-law," the analyst points out, "but we never have to deprecate something if we feel superior to it."

He says these attitudes toward women stem from envy.

"Men can't tolerate the idea that women do something they can't — create life. Women can create life, but man can only destroy it.

"Now," he sighs, "we are even taking the creativity of childbirth away from women by telling them that overpopulation, too, can destroy. The percentage of serious crimes committed by women is increasing faster for the first time than that of men. I think there is a connection. When the forces of creativity have no constructive outlet, they find a destructive one."

He is concerned about the effect of changes in the woman's role on other aspects of society. "I am worried about what will happen to the family. Despite its faults, the family structure has been the basic unit of our civilization for thousands of years," the analyst says. He does not think it can be discarded.

Hospitals 'Fail' on Responsibilities

By GLENNIS ZILM

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 93 per cent of 973 women who sought help from a national abortion advisory agency last year had to go to the United States for abortions.

Lore Perron, director of the Association for the Review of Canadian Abortion Laws, Inc., said in an interview this week that public hospitals in Canada do not meet their responsibilities.

Hospitals which legally could set up abortion committees either refuse to do so or instruct the committees to be too strict in interpreting acceptable reasons for abortion, she said.

Of six main public hospitals in Ottawa, for example, three had Roman Catholic affiliations and had not set up abortion committees. Two others had committees, but accepted only a few applications.

"Only one hospital takes a legally liberal attitude and accepts its responsibility — and their operating facilities are overloaded," she said.

"Ottawa's situation is not a singular example. Most cities in Canada also have hospitals that fail to meet their responsibilities."

Mrs. Perron was commenting on a news release about statistics on 1,062 women who came for help.

"Out of the 1,062 women, 50 carried on with their pregnancies after counselling from the association, 19 were found to be not pregnant and 20 aborted (spontaneously miscarried)."

Of the total pregnancies terminated, 61 were done in Canadian hospitals, she said.

The ages of those women who came for help ranged from 13 years to 50, she said. Ninety-seven were under age 18.

Only 26 per cent of the women who sought help from the association were married, the figures showed.

The association stresses counselling and educational help, Mrs. Perron said. During counselling, methods of birth control are discussed.

"There's so much ignorance involving birth control and just normal facts about the reproductive process," she said.

The association found that more than one-third of the women believed they were using some method of contraception, but ignorance or mistake had led to the unwanted pregnancy.

"Doctors often fail patients by not explaining the birth control method or device properly. They assume too much about the patient's knowledge."

Mrs. Perron said that, contrary to a number of reports, the association's statistics show that only about 4 per cent of the women had a previous history of abortion.

"And of our people, who have had counselling from us earlier, only six (0.6 per cent) were repeaters," she said.

New School Plagued

'Poor Vic West'

"Poor old Vic West school," said Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon. "What else can possibly go wrong with it?"

McKinnon was commenting after the board's construction and maintenance committee learned Tuesday night that immediate action should be taken to correct a possibly potentially dangerous condition in the school's beams.

The school has been plagued with construction difficulties, since the board began efforts several years ago to get a new school built to replace the old dilapidated building that was then serving the area.

The new school was finally completed last summer and opened in the fall. But earlier this year extra partitions had to be built in to reduce the size of the open area.

Sig Dietze, construction and maintenance supervisor, told the committee that it had been found the beams used in the open area section of the school were of a glue-laminated wooden type which, it had been found, were subject to occasional failure.

Beams of the same type in other schools in the district, particularly Reynolds high and Victoria school, had previously been shored up, but it had not been known that the Vic West school had the same type.

To ensure safety, immediate action should be taken, Dietze said, although he emphasized that there was no need for any panic on the part of parents of students attending Vic West.

The committee recommended that a firm of consultants undertake an immediate study to find the best method of shoring up the beams.

Few Objections to New Zoning Law

Saanich's new zoning bylaw went through a public hearing Wednesday night without any great objection from about 35 people who attended a meeting at municipal hall.

A few points were sent to municipal planning committee for reconsideration with the expectation that when those recommendations come back to council the bylaw will be quickly adopted.

The new zoning bylaw, which has been under consideration for several months, does not intend to change any existing zones, municipal officials explained as the meeting opened.

"The bylaw in its new form has built-in flexibility and is much clearer and easier for the public to understand," said Tom Loney, municipal planner.

The most substantial brief came from the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association which, among other things, suggested that developers submit estimates of the costs of construction and selling prices "to indicate not only the percentage of profit but his good faith."

"Council should satisfy itself that all developers with which they do business are financially sound and that their record of previous construction can bear close scrutiny," said B. H. E. Goult, association president.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said later that the mild public response was probably the result of all the explanatory work that had been done.

"Many persons were quite concerned at first but the explanations that were given obviously allayed fears."

No Trade Talks with Nixon

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon looks forward to his trip to Ottawa Thursday as "an important visit," the White House said Tuesday, but emphasized there will be no trade negotiations during the talks with Prime Minister Trudeau.

Ron Ziegler, presidential press secretary, also disclosed details of the trip which spans three days but will last only 40 hours, somewhat shorter than anticipated.

The presidential party will not arrive in Ottawa until 6:30 p.m. EST Thursday and will depart Saturday at 10:25 a.m.

Asked during the daily afternoon press briefing whether the trip wasn't "mainly symbolic," Ziegler replied "not at all," adding that Nixon and Trudeau have a number of topics they want to discuss.

He also said Treasury Secretary John Connally, principal architect of the U.S. economic policies that put a strain on Canada-U.S. relations, would not be among the party of officials and wives accompanying the president and Mrs. Nixon on the state visit.

Although there had been speculation Connally would make the Ottawa visit, Ziegler said he had never been scheduled for the trip.

Rupert Ferries To Continue

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Public Works Commissioner George Easley says the main southern terminus for the state ferry system will not be switched from Prince Rupert to Seattle.

Easley said he had been misunderstood when it was reported in Seattle that Alaska might route all ferry traffic for southeastern Alaska through Seattle.

"I was explaining," Easley said, "that Seattle is not the logical southern terminus except perhaps if we had only to be concerned with tourist traffic."

One of the four southeastern ferries stops in Seattle year-round, with the other three operating through Prince Rupert. During the off-season, a second vessel makes the Seattle run.

Greater Victoria Music Festival

Song, Speech, Keyboards Fill Day

By BERT BINNY

Pianists, singers, speech artists and the last few accordionists occupied a further 10 sessions at the Greater Victoria Music Festival Tuesday.

In the accordion classes the under-16 duet of Deborah and Roy Gerrath scored 87 points, highest mark in the accordion division.

Deborah was awarded 86 for her solo Monday, a mark shared by the under-15 duet of Gina and Susan Shpiruk who performed Tuesday.

The Aldyen Hamber Chapter, IODE, senior accordion award, was won by Rolf Gilstein with 83 points Monday night but Rolf will be back again when the string classes start April 17. He is also an accomplished cellist.

Two classes, regarded as of special importance, were also heard Monday. The operatic class for female voices was won by Judith Bilton with 89 points, just one more than the mark gained by Joyce Aitchison.

The musical comedy class produced six entrants. Eric Roberts, with his Reviewing the Situation from Oliver! came out on top with 90.

But Debra Crozier-Smith, with My Man's Gone Now, from Porgy and Bess, had 89. Roger Beavan's There's Nothing Like A Dame, from South Pacific, earned 88.

The open piano concerto class produced something of a surprise when the 1971 City Medallion winner, Kwok May-Ling, finished a single point behind Allen Reiser, 89 to 88.

The open sonata-sonatina was won by Jim Picken with 87 and he followed this success with an 88 in the open class Tuesday.

Tuesday' speech arts' program saw 14 girls under eight, 13 in the under 16 dramatic monologue and 23 in the girls under 10.

Winner of the girls under 10 class was Patricia Izik with 87 while Elizabeth Kemp had 86.

The standard of performance throughout the day was described by adjudicator Gay Scrivener as "very good indeed."

Piano classes, before adjudicator John Simons, continued Tuesday morning and afternoon at the Newcombe Auditorium and at night at St. John's Memorial Hall.

A score of 91 went to Walter Prossnitz in the intermediate concerto class. Roger Scobie had 90.

In the Canadian compositions, junior class, Geoffrey Jay had 89 with Gloria Wong and Brenda Boyd with 88 each.

There were two 89's during Tuesday morning's vocal classes, scored by Jennifer Angus and Andrew Purcell, both in quick study.

Of 26 grades awarded by the adjudicator, Donald Francke, in the afternoon, none went below 81 nor above 86.

Brothers Hurt In Derailment

HOPE (CP) — Two young brothers from Kamloops were injured, one critically, when a Canadian National Railways freight train was derailed Monday night in the Fraser Valley, 14 miles west of here.

A CNR official said Roger McDougal, 24, was critically injured and transferred from hospital here to Chilliwack General Hospital. His brother John, 22, was in hospital at Hope. The railway spokesman said the two were not employees of the CNR, but were riding the freight as transients. Cause of the derailment was not known.

The colorful history of Mexico portrayed in dance will be seen at 8:30 p.m. Thursday at the Royal Theatre, when Fiesta Mexicana appears under sponsorship of the Victoria Symphony Society.

The colorfully costumed company of 30 dancers, singers and musicians will present a panorama of Mexico, ancient and modern, in a performance that has been seen across this continent and abroad.

Today is a big day for Victoria violinist, Mark Butler, who makes his debut at famous Wigmore Hall in London, England.

Appearance at Wigmore Hall is a traditional mark of outstanding distinction for a musician.

Mark is the son of Canon Hilary and Mrs. Butler of 2323 Greenlands Road.

The City of Gardens chapter of the Sweet Adelines (the feminine version of barbershop-quartet-singing) will present a concert at 8 p.m. April 21 in the cultural hall of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 2990 Quadra.

Bart, Zumbo Ballet Guests

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two principal dancers with the Paris Opera Ballet will return for second guest appearances when the Royal Winnipeg Ballet stages its annual spring performance here April 26 to 30.

Patrice Bart and Francesca Zumbo, who were enthusiastically received by Winnipeg audiences when they performed with the ballet company in 1970, are expected to dance Maurice Bejart's Bhakti as well as the classical Pas de Deux from Don Quixote.

Bhakti is danced to Hindu classical music, while Don Quixote is a Spanish-flavored ballet choreographed in 1869 by Marius Petipa to the music of Leon Minkus.

Also on the program is Rondo by John Neumeier and Eliot Field's Meadow Lark.

The Winnipeg company is returning April 19 from a three-month tour in Australia.

Morton:

Energy Crisis Already Begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Rogers Morton said Monday the United States faces an immediate energy crisis.

He said while the public uses far more fuel and electrical energy than ever before, production in these fields is badly lagging.

Morton gave congressmen two examples:

● Forty to 50 new electrical power plants were due to begin operations this summer but probably won't because of environmental, technical, construction and licensing problems.

● By 1985, more than half of the U.S. oil supplies may have to be imported because even with the Alaskan oil added to the domestic production only half of the expected demand can be met within the country.

Morton was the first witness in the House of Representatives interior committee's 10-day investigation of U.S. energy problems.

Meanwhile a top U.S. defence department spokesman warned Tuesday that the economy and security of North America and Europe could be jeopardized by 1980 because of increasing dependence on foreign oil.

Barry Shillito, assistant defence secretary for installations and logistics, said that even now the U.S. could be "seriously inconvenienced by any foreign oil denial of major magnitude."

The seriousness of the problem, Shillito told the House interior committee, is not clearly understood in the government community here or around the country, partly because America has become accustomed to being self-sufficient in energy.

"Well before this decade is out we could live in the shadow of a threat to the economy, the national well-being and the security of North America and Europe," Shillito declared.

Even the massive Alaskan oil reserves, when it finally reaches the market, will only slow America's dependence on foreign oil which will come mostly from the middle east, Shillito said.

"From a purely military viewpoint, the developing energy crisis could have a severe economic impact," he explained, although he said under the "worst conditions now foreseeable" the military's needs could be met by domestic production.

Order Blocks Pickets

OTTAWA (UPI) — Striking members of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians were under court order today to refrain from picketing any place which President Nixon will visit here later this week.

More than 2,000 NABET members have been conducting rotating strikes against the CBC since Jan. 22 to back demands for more pay and a shorter work week.

The union had announced it planned to picket all events which Nixon is to attend. This involved setting up picket lines around Parliament Hill, Uplands Airforce Base and the National Arts Centre.

The CTV television network Tuesday was granted however, a temporary injunction until after Nixon's visit.

The court order was filed by Tom Gould, a CTV news director, Roy Fabish, vice-president of CJOH, a CTV affiliate station, and Wayne Spooner.

The striking NABET members had asked all union members covering the Nixon trip to honor their picket lines. This included NABET members working for CTV.

Baby Giraffe Born in B.C.

PENTICTON (CP) — The first giraffe ever born in B.C. — a 20-pound male — was born at the Okanagan Game From near Penticton during the weekend. Game farm officials said the giraffe was on its feet in about 20 minutes. It is only the second to be born in captivity in Canada.

Morton:

Energy Crisis Already Begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Rogers Morton said Monday the United States faces an immediate energy crisis.

He said while the public uses far more fuel and electrical energy than ever before, production in these fields is badly lagging.

Morton gave congressmen two examples:

● Forty to 50 new electrical power plants were due to begin operations this summer but probably won't because of environmental, technical, construction and licensing problems.

● By 1985, more than half of the U.S. oil supplies may have to be imported because even with the Alaskan oil added to the domestic production only half of the expected demand can be met within the country.

Morton was the first witness in the House of Representatives interior committee's 10-day investigation of U.S. energy problems.

Meanwhile a top U.S. defence department spokesman warned Tuesday that the economy and security of North America and Europe could be jeopardized by 1980 because of increasing dependence on foreign oil.

Barry Shillito, assistant defence secretary for installations and logistics, said that even now the U.S. could be "seriously inconvenienced by any foreign oil denial of major magnitude."

The seriousness of the problem, Shillito told the House interior committee, is not clearly understood in the government community here or around the country, partly because America has become accustomed to being self-sufficient in energy.

"Well before this decade is out we could live in the shadow of a threat to the economy, the national well-being and the security of North America and Europe," Shillito declared.

Even the massive Alaskan oil reserves, when it finally reaches the market, will only slow America's dependence on foreign oil which will come mostly from the middle east, Shillito said.

"From a purely military viewpoint, the developing energy crisis could have a severe economic impact," he explained, although he said under the "worst conditions now foreseeable" the military's needs could be met by domestic production.

Order Blocks Pickets

OTTAWA (UPI) — Striking members of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians were under court order today to refrain from picketing any place which President Nixon will visit here later this week.

More than 2,000 NABET members have been conductiong rotating strikes against the CBC since Jan. 22 to back demands for more pay and a shorter work week.

The union had announced it planned to picket all events which Nixon is to attend. This involved setting up picket lines around Parliament Hill, Uplands Airforce Base and the National Arts Centre.

The CTV television network Tuesday was granted however, a temporary injunction until after Nixon's visit.

The court order was filed by Tom Gould, a CTV news director, Roy Fabish, vice-president of CJOH, a CTV affiliate station, and Wayne Spooner.

The striking NABET members had asked all union members covering the Nixon trip to honor their picket lines. This included NABET members working for CTV.

EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY

Bruce Lowther

ABC has become the first of the U.S. networks to announce its schedule for next season and the biggest surprises are the cancellation of Longstreet and the survival of Sixth Sense and Alias Smith and Jones. The details, starting at 8 p.m. daily:

Sunday, FBI and movies; Monday, The Rookies (police) and NFL football or movies; Tuesday, Temperature's Rising (hospital situation comedy), Movie of the Week and Marcus Welby; Wednesday, Paul Lynde Show (situation comedy), Movie of the Week (new) and Julie Andrews variety.

Thursday, Mod Squad, The Men (suspense trilogy including Delphi Bureau, Jigsaw and Assignment: Vienna) and Owen Marshall; Friday, Brady Bunch, Partridge Family, Room 222, Odd Couple and Love, American Style; Saturday, Alias Smith and Jones, Streets of San Francisco (detectives) and Sixth Sense.

Kung Fu, that oddball Chinese western, will replace Smith and Jones once a month. A more detailed rundown of all three U.S. networks' plans for next season will be in the Saturday AbouTV supplement soon.

□

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's answer — We're back to lines from well-known popular songs and the one that goes "You'll find your fortune's fallin' all over town, etc," comes from Pennies from Heaven. Or, as some wag once said, it's the birthday song for Jack: Benny's 11.

Today's question is more of the idiotic same, and just as easy. The line is "Like a bolt out of the blue, fate steps in and sees you through." All you are required to do is name the song, but experts should also name the movie it came from and the man who sang it. Answers Thursday.

Duncan Liberals Choose Youth

DUNCAN — Cowichan-Malahat Liberals have put their weight behind a man only a year older than the present B.C. government.

The Liberal Party chose Daniel Clements Tuesday night to represent the party in the next provincial elections.

Clements, 21 and married, defeated Cowichan district school teacher Doug Stewart, 44, in a ballot vote by the 23 party members at the convention.

Lawyer Mike Coleman, who nominated Clements said, "I feel he has a good chance of drawing not only present support but future support to the party."

Clements stressed party organization and greater youth involvement in his address to the convention.

In an interview later he said: "I took the Liberal nomination because youth today are not involved in politics as were the youth of the last generation. Without the younger generation's support, there is no way we can continue our democratic form of government."

Concerning the present government he said: "The Social Credit have not done a bad job but their policies as of the last four of five years have been dated. This is showing up especially in our environment."

Indian Gentleman Bid Farewell

By KLAUS MUENTER
Colonist Correspondent

KUPER ISLAND — The ravens have stopped weeping and have flown away.

Hundreds of people from many Vancouver Island points and from the mainland came Tuesday morning to bury August Jack, who died last Thursday in his 108th year.

Believed to be the oldest person in B.C., he had lived for more than a century in the Westholme area and he had been a gentleman at heart and in manner.

Many of the people who came by ferry or by fishboat were relatives. High above the small Catholic Church, which could not hold all of them, an eagle soared and spread its wings in the frigid spring wind.

It was as if a symbol of freedom had become airborne while in the small church the people assembled to pray, to sing and to be grateful that a very old man had departed in peace. Outside, the mourners stood in groups and waited to accompany August Jack for the last time.

Below a soft swell ran in long white lines against the beach and further away tree studded islands lay in the peaceful morning. Some of those outside spoke of the miraculous healing of a white man, others talked of the man they had come to bury and some stood in silence.

Now and then the singing in the church became audible, drifting away without echo — and then everything went silent.

Slowly people filed out of the small church and pallbearers eased the coffin down the few steps and loaded it on a pickup truck for the last few hundred yards to the cemetery.

A young priest carefully closed the door of the church, which soon was deserted again. From below, blue smoke rose from the openings in the longhouse where food was prepared for the many mourners.

Reaching the cemetery the crowd walked past the large wooden cross and assembled for the last rites of a world that August Jack had no longer been able to understand.

He always had been close to nature and until he reached the age of 87 years he had worked as a longshoreman. Born on Lummi Island, Wash., he was a member of the Kuper Lsland Band, which also was hosting his final homecoming.

Meanwhile, back at the Kuper Island school at the island's western shore, about a mile from the cemetery, youngsters prepared for their lunch hour and some of them watched the first mourners depart in the school boat and a small fishing vessel on their way back to Chemainus on Vancouver Island.

Others were to follow later in the ferry and aboard other fishing boats.

There was not much sadness left any longer because many had realized that Jack had walked slowly through another door.

Fears for Beauty Spots Sparks Public Use Bid

PARKSVILLE — Concern for three Nanaimo area beauty spots will base a resolution to be presented Friday by the Arrowsmith Natural History Society to the Federation of B.C. Naturalists.

The areas are Little Mountain, Arbutus Point — also known as Madrona Point — and the Illusion Lakes near Horne Lake. All are in the Nanaimo regional district.

The history society will present its resolution at the naturalists' convention in Vancouver.

● Little Mountain stands nearly 1,000 feet above its surrounding area and offers a panoramic view of water and mountains in all directions. A forest lookout tower and microwave installation are located on Crown land at the summit.

Generations of district children have enjoyed Little Mountain. Boy Scouts have made their own trail up from Parksville; Girl Guides have always used the mountain for field trips, learning to identify wildflowers and shrubs — many of which have all but disappeared in the surrounding district, due to development.

Development is now spreading up Little Mountain, and the local society feels it would like to have a certain area preserved for the use of the public.

● Arbutus Point — originally known as Beaver Cove — is becoming a residential development. It was former B.C. Forest Products land and the only deep water bay in the Parksville area.

In early days, settlers and supplies landed there from historic ships such as the SS Beaver, the Emily Harris, the Maude, and others, before the road was put through from Nanaimo. Remains of the original wharf and warehouses are still to be seen.

The society believes that such a beautiful and historic site should be perserved for the enjoyment of the public.

● Illusion Lakes, is an area of exceptional beauty. It is an ideal spot for camping, picnicking, fishing, boating, riding, or hiking, and is of easy access from the highway.

The society's resolution to the federation will request help in efforts to have these areas set aside for the use of the public.

Transfer Fee Sets Record

BELT HORIZANTE, Brazil — Tostao, the Brazilian soccer star often described as the successor to the great Pele, was purchased Monday by the Vasco da Gama soccer club of Rio de Janeiro for an estimated $560,000, reportedly the highest transfer fee for any athlete in the history of the Americas.

Tostao, a center-forward, has been with Cruzeiro since starting his pro career in 1964. Last year he was chosen to succeed Pele as the wearer of jersey number 10 on the Brazilian national team.

NANAIMO (CP) — Police and civil defence crews searched in vain Tuesday for seven-year-old Heida McAlpine, reported missing in the Chase River area, near Nanaimo.

Plans were made to appeal to volunteers for an all-out search.

Then Heida was found. Sound asleep. Under her bed.

Cumberland To Be 'Phased Out'

Mayor 'Had a Belly Full' Over Hospital's Future

By RUTH McKELLAR
Colonist Correspondent

CUMBERLAND — Mayor William Moncrief told Cumberland hospital board Tuesday night he has "had a belly full" after a recent meeting with deputy minister of health services Donald Cox.

The mayor asked to speak to the board Tuesday night after his Victoria visit on several municipal matters. Moncrief said he wanted to talk about the future of Cumberland hospital and not its internal administration. Hospital board chairman Jim Fomen was aware of his actions he said.

Moncrief said: "I don't think we're getting a fair shake. British Columbia Hospital Insurance Services have no plans for the future for the hospital, next year or five years from now."

Cox told him that he could hardly sleep at night when he thought about Cumberland hospital and its fire trap situation, the mayor said.

As soon as the top floor of St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox is finished, Moncrief said, he believed that the Cumberland hospital will be phased out.

A hospital referendum passed two years ago was put to the voters of Cumberland under "false pretences," Moncrief charged. In the referendum $24,000 was promised for Cumberland hospital out of the quarter mill levy. Now it would get $10,000 and no future, Moncrief said.

He claimed BCHIS had no answers to his questions, "all they did was beat around the bush and offer me files to read".

During his talk, Moncrief told the hospital board he wanted it to be known that he did not like taking public action without the knowledge of Dan Campbell, the MLA for Comox. He said several phone calls had been made in an effort to contact him. Campbell is on the northern end of Vancouver Island at present.

Moncrief repeated his faith in a public statement made by Campbell, who said that as long as he is the representative of the Comox area the hospital will not be taken away from Cumberland.

"I want to go on record", Moncrief said, "but my remarks are not meant to hit Dan Campbell in the eye".

Moncrief claimed the whole matter was a political issue. He said he felt the situation and problems should be made public so that everyone will know just what is going on regarding the Cumberland hospital.

Board member Bryson Parham said the board must make it a political issue.

Board chairman Fomen said it is time for concerned people to take up the battle.

"We've been going on the basis that it's lovely today and that it will be lovely again tomorrow and that is not true".

Fomen said he hoped that at the annual meeting of Cumberland Hospital Association next Tuesday, a board of directors will be elected which is prepared to "go all the way."

Dahlias To Cut

In yesterday's column I gave the names of some giant exhibition dahlias that caught my eye and excited my admiration in various public parks and gardens last summer.

These giants are the ones which win prizes in the flower shows and evoke ooh's and ah's of admiration from visitors to your garden. It certainly does things for the ego to grow and display such a fantastic flower, but I should point out that these giants are not too good as cut flowers for the house. Many of these exhibition dahlias have blooms as much as twelve inches across — roughly the size of a floor mop — and much too overpowering for the average vase or bowl.

To meet the demand for cut flowers, the dahlia breeders have evolved a class of plant that stands only about 3½ feet tall, blooming prolifically and with long, wiry flower stems and blooms only 4 to 6 inches across. These are much more delicate and graceful in the mass than the big fellows, and they last a long time in water.

★ ★ ★

A few of these cut flower dahlias that appealed to me and found their way into my little black notebook are these:

Prairie Fire is an exceptionally clear and bright shade of scarlet, lighting up the garden or a flower arrangement almost like a neon sign. Wedding Day, on the other hand, is a fine pure white of an exceptionally pleasing shape. Both these varieties are in the decorative class.

Disneyland is a fine bicolor semi-decorative, bright golden yellow and blood red. Pattern is a rich lavender decorative, with each petal tipped in white. Polly Peachum, a semi-decorative in a deep carmine pink, has incurved petals and brings to mind, when you look at the flower, the bobbed flappers of the 1920's.

★ ★ ★

Hamari Girl is a fine pink with a golden sheen, while Annette is somewhat larger flower in butter yellow. Both are in the formal decorative class. Arabian Night, also a decorative, is the nearest-to-black dahlia I have ever seen — a very dark maroon.

Pretty Girl, a semi-cactus type, is a blend of pink and orange, while Holiday Maker, another shaggy semi-cactus, is a deep orange scarlet with the petal tips fringed and fimbriated. Jack of All Trades, a semi-decorative, is a dazzling signal red while Ulva Quarrell, decorative, is bright red with white petal tips.

Another fine type of flower for cutting is the Ball class of dahlias. These make tall plants, up to five feet in height and requiring staking, while the flowers are ball-shaped or globular, about four inches across, born on long, straight stems, most interesting in floral arrangements.

★ ★ ★

Some of my favorites among the ball dahlias are Davina Rosemary, a deep cheery red and Puff Ball, a delicate pink with a lighter centre. Newmiller is a fine bicolor, yellow with white petal tips, while Anneke Weidner has been winning all sorts of honors in Holland with its deep lavender blooms on a white base.

Still fairly new are the early dwarf bedding dahlias, standing only knee-high and requiring no staking. These compact plants come into bloom much earlier than their big brothers, flowering without a break all summer long.

Some good ones are Roquencourt, with bronze foliage and orange-red flowers; Sneek, a very bright red decorative; Frank Soeten, a pure white cactus type; Brielle in sulphur yellow and Urk in light salmon and bronze, both semi-cactus types.

Hanoi's Attack Unfair

WASHINGTON — North Vietnam has launched its long-awaited offensive into South Vietnam. The U.S. reacted swiftly. Top officials in Washington issued a protest. They said North Vietnam was being unfair.

Quite rightly. Why doesn't North Vietnam fight fair and send these troops to invade Laos and Cambodia instead? What are they trying to do, Vietnamize the war?

★ ★ ★

Moreover, as the state department pointed out, the offensive is a clear violation of the 1968 understanding. The understanding, as the U.S. understands it, provides that Americans won't resume bombing North Vietnam if the enemy don't attack major cities in South Vietnam. And that's exactly what they're doing.

It shows how you simply can't trust the North Vietnamese.

Unfortunately, when it comes to teaching them a lesson, options are limited. It sounds as though the easiest way would be to resume bombing these treacherous North Vietnamese. But the U.S. can't do that.

It can't do that because it long ago resumed bombing these treacherous North Vietnamese.

But don't worry. The U.S. has a plan. In order to cripple the current North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam and teach them a lesson, the U.S. is going to go invade somebody else.

The plan was conceived by one of the top, up-to-date military minds in the Pentagon, that of General Homer T. Pettibone, U.S. Army Flying Corps, who is known as "the brains behind the Vietnam strategy."

"As you recall," General Pettibone told a press briefing, "we initially invaded Cambodia and Laos to cripple any North Vietnamese offensive, such as the current one. And the president, himself, said these invasions were tremendous successes.

"Therefore, to cripple the current offensive again," said the general triumphantly, "all we need to is go invade another country!"

★ ★ ★

While the reporters sat stunned by the brilliance of this strategy, General Pettibone tapped on an imposing map with his swagger stick.

"The initial problem we faced," he said, "was finding another country we hadn't already invaded. That ruled out Laos and Cambodia. We thought of Thailand, but we already have troops there to defend it from invasion. And we felt the concept of our troops fighting our troops might prove unpopular at home.

★ ★ ★

"But at last, we found a country we hadn't invaded. It's the very key to Southeast Asia. As you will see from its position on the map. . . It's right here somewhere. Hmmm . . . Well, anyway, gentlemen, we will invade the Kingdom of Kong!

"We have cabled King Kong, himself, offering him the most modern of invasions with thousands and thousands of bombers, tanks, guns and the very latest in crop defoliants. Expense is no object, we told him, in making Kong as peaceful as Cambodia and Laos are today.

'Oh, wait till the North Vietnamese in South Vietnam get wind of this," said the general, rubbing his hands. "Believe you me, they'll turn tail and run."

Japanese Touchy

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Producer Ross Hunter who has given more work to Oriental actors than a fortune cookie factory is under fire from a Japanese-American group for casting Sir John Gielgud in the role of Chang, one of the key parts of Lost Horizon. The Japanese American Citizens League's letter contained a veiled threat to release its contents to the printed media if no reply were made within 10 days. Hunter apparently beat them to the punch. Hunter says of Gielgud's part: "That particular character is an Oxford-educated man, part English, part Oriental, but the British accent is imperative in the role. At one point I had offered the part to Toshiro Mifune, but he was unable to take the role because of a previous commitment. Even if Mifune had done it, I would have dubbed his voice with a British accent."

"Why would they go after me?" asks Hunter. "I've always been one of the strongest boosters of Oriental talent in the movies." Hunter made Flower Drum Song with an all-Oriental cast. He's also the producer who brought Anna May Wong back to the screen in Portrait in Black. He said that his new musical version of the James Hilton classic is set in Tibet, but so far he hasn't found any members of the Screen Actors Guild from Tibet. That's why he just signed James Shigeta to play the Tibetan monk, a starring role. Shigeta, who has worked for Hunter before, is a Nisei singer who will introduce one of the new Bacharach-David tunes in the movie.

Big mystery. In the mail comes a cheesecake photo—the widely printed one from X, Y and Zee —from Elizabeth Taylor in Budapest. The inscription reads: "Best wishes, Jim. Elizabeth." No note. Nothing. Just that gorgeous picture. Only clue is that perhaps she wanted me to see how she looks at 40. Better than ever.

★ ★ ★

Nice of Dinah Shore to dedicate her new album Is That All There Is? to the Cosmopolitan centrefold nude shot of boy friend Burt Reynolds.

★ ★ ★

Hard to believe that Cheryl Miller, who has been in the movies all her life, started out in this business playing a boy. Lunching with her the other day she told of how she started at age 19 days playing the baby boy with Gary Cooper in Casanova Brown. Now she's on her 10th comeback which is unusual for such a beautiful girl still in her 20s. Lately, Cheryl has been the swinging Samantha Pudding, woman's libber, sex pot and femme fatale on the daytime serial Bright Promise. But that was dropped the day we lunched. But that didn't bother Cheryl. She also was a regular on The Donna Reed Show, Perry Mason, Flipper and Daktari. "I never feel badly about a show ending. I chalk it all up to good experience and never look back—only ahead."

★ ★ ★

Seems everybody in the Mancini family is musical. Henry's 19-year-old daughter Felice has composed her first song. Sometimes, which the Carpenters liked so much it was included in the group's Grammy-award hit album. Hank says she will make more money off her first song than he did during his first two years as a professional musician. The Mancini son, Chris, is the leader of a rock group called Chris Mancini and the Fly.

Sydney Harris

We Tell It Like It Is

Many people today foolishly imagine that "journalism" is something very different from history. But journalism, as the wise old Briton once observed, 'is simply history written on the run."

And history, as such men as Voltaire, Gibbon, and Carlyle have pointed out, "is indeed little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind."

★ ★ ★

The same "sin" that journalism is accused of — the sin of stressing catastrophes, evils and sensational events as against the noble, virtuous and tranquil episodes in human life — is precisely what the history books are composed of.

In his brilliant new book of essays, If Men Were Angles, Milton Mayer suggests that we look in our encyclopedias or history books for the name of "Poplicola," and suggests that we will look for it in vain. Poplicola was one of the Roman leaders that Plutarch wrote about in his famous "Lives."

He was the most eminent in virtue and power, always victorious, good and honorable: his riches were nobly acquired and dispersed to the needy: ye mas more just than Solon, beloved and revered by the greatest city in history.

★ ★ ★

Yet not one person in a thousand — nay, in ten thousand — knows who he is or has ever heard his name. On the contrary, Nero is recognized by nearly everyone as "the madman who fiddled while Rome burnt."

The evil reputation of men lives long after them, while the goodness is not even interred in the history books.

As I am fond of pointing out, even fewer persons are aware that Adam and Eve had a third son, who was not involved in a murder case. The Bible is supposed to be the best-read book in the world, but only Biblical scholars could name Cain and Abel's youngest brother.

★ ★ ★

Millions of readers could rattle off the names of sea-pirates and conquering admirals and great heroes of naval battles — but how many have ever heard of the man who saved untold numbers of sailors' lives in the last 100 years by his legislation to prevent overloading of cargoes?

Yet Samuel Plimpsoll did more for the safety and welfare of sailors than all the Lord Nelsons rolled into one.

★ ★ ★

Everyone knows who made war; no one knows who secured the peace; everyone knows (or thinks he knows) why Rome fell; no one knows who made it rise.

Everyone knows the noisy destroyers in history; no one knows the quiet workers for good.

To blame journalism ("history on the run") for its sensationalism is like blaming Niagara Falls for running down and not up.

Student Irks NDP Chief

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — National NDP leader David Lewis bristled Tuesday afternoon when a student suggested that the party's plans of nationalizing certain industries will not work because public corporations are less efficient than private enterprise and public servants are lazier than those working in private industry.

The student, one of more than 600 at Timmins High and Vocational School, had wondered how the NDP would make these companies work since the public industry does not provide the same incentive for workers that private industry does.

"This is totally not true," Lewis replied.

"You have been brainwashed by propaganda and prejudiced comments rather than taking the time to study and learn all the facts."

Lewis said Monday, during a Sudbury television interview that if large corporations operate to the detriment of its workers and the community they should be nationalized.

He referred specifically to large layoffs at the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. and reports that Inco had been working overtime prior to the layoffs to stockpile material in case of a strike this summer.

The student said prime examples of laxity in public corporations was the Canadian National Railway, which recently increased its rates, and hospitals, which during recent years, have increased the price of a room from $14 a day to about $70.

Lewis replied that from his 12 years' experience with the CNR he had learned it was every bit as efficient as the privately-owned Canadian Pacific Railway, and that the CNR was more concerned about the welfare of Canada.

He said rates on both railways are equal because they have to be approved by the Canadian transport commission. A major difference, he said, is that since the CPR is a private company, it does not have to answer to the federal government and so can reduce passenger service, which it is doing now.

Lewis said the increase in hospital costs results primarily from workers now earning a decent wage, and increased prices of new buildings, equipment, and additional operation costs.

He pointed to Air Canada as an efficient, publicly-owned corporation, saying that "in the world of aviation it is the most efficient anywhere."

Asked about legalizing marijuana, he said:

"The use of marijuana has no place in the Criminal Code and it is wrong to make its use a crime and give our young people criminal records.

"I'm not prepared to favor that it be available to all, the 11- 12- and 13-year-olds, but it ought not be a crime."

Lewis was in this mining town of 2,800 for the day as part of a two-day swing through Sudbury and Timmins to meet students, labor leaders and NDP candidates in anticipation of a federal election.

Lewis also told the students that Canada does not need much foreign capital to buy back the Canadian economy from foreign control, because Canada now has all the money it needs in the form of savings and investment capital.

"If this available cash is used to develop Canada, then we won't need foreign capital," he said.

Sprung Blossoms

That spring flower awaited eagerly each year by so many Victorians has just about finished its job for another season. With the peak of the blooms past, Robbie Beckerly, 1261 Goldstream, provincial public works employee, was busy Tuesday removing loads of daffodils from gardens surrounding the legislative buildings.

Shoot Horses—with Vaccine

The B.C. agriculture department has suggested that horse-owners travelling through the Okanagan this summer have their animals immunized against a form of equine "sleeping sickness" which is epidemic in that area.

The disease, western equine encephalomyelitis, was confirmed in 60 horses in the Okanagan Valley and nearby areas last summer. Three humans also came down with the disease, first recorded cases in B.C. and the only such cases in Canada during 1971.

The disease is transmitted through the bite of a female mosquito, which likely picks up the virus from birds, reptiles or amhibians, some of which are the over-winter hosts of the infective agent.

The agriculture department says immunization of horses should be done in April or, the latest, in May. Vaccine that would protect humans is still in the experimental stage.

The disease has symptoms similar to Venezuelan equine encephalitis, which has struck hard among the horse population of the southern United States and is moving northward into Canada.

The disease has caused such alarm in some areas that aggressive mosquito spraying is being considered, even in districts where the soil and water already are contaminated by insecticides.

Victims To Have Assistance

B.C. Crime Injuries Compensation Act will come into effect July 1 under a cabinet order made public Tuesday.

The act, passed at the last session of the Legislature, will provide aid under the Workmen's Compensation Board to victims of crime and to those injured while helping policemen.

The same day the new Family Relations Act, a comprehensive new act covering many aspects of marital and family law will take effect. The act was also passed at the last session of the Legislature.

On June 1, amendments to the Administration Act, in connection with people who die intestate, come into force.

Saanich Passing Increase

Saanich council is going through the formalities required to give the mayor and aldermen 6.5 per cent increases in their indemnities.

At a council meeting Monday night, a bylaw was read that would give Mayor Hugh Curtis an indemnity of $8,626.50, compared with the $8,100 he received previously. Aldermen, who got $2,400, now would be paid $2,556 a year.

It was first proposed that the indemnities be raised to $9,000 for the mayor and $3,600 for aldermen but they were reduced to increments of 6.5 per cent after council decided it should conform with the ceilings advocated by the provincial government.

Ald. Leslie Passmore and Ald. Frank Waring continue to be opposed to the increases, even at the rate of 6.5 per cent.

Student Joins Trustee Group

Greater Victoria high school student Tom Ingram was welcomed to the membership of Greater Victoria school board's education committee at its Monday night meeting.

Ingram represents the Inter-School Students' Council, and is a participating member of the education committee to give the board a student point of view in keeping with its policy of acquiring student opinion on issues.

In other business the education committee:

- Approved several locally-developed high school courses, including English rhetoric, the city, shorterhand and fish and game.
- Approved a motion by trustee Dr. Philip Ney that "the most capable and mature teachers" be encouraged to teach in kindergarten and the first three grades.
- Agreed schools should be open to parents and the public throughout the year, rather than just in one special Education Week, although the week might still be held.
- Agreed to recommend to the board that it write the B.C. education department urging it to provide texts for classes using the initial teaching alphabet to learn reading.

The finance committee learned that the total costs of polling in connection with the budget referendum last month were $3,284.54. The board spent about another $872 for advertising on behalf of the referendum.

B.C. Gives Backing To Homes Project

Oak Bay Kiwanis Club has been advised that its application to the provincial government for a $247,000 grant to build a senior citizens' housing project has been approved.

This represents, said A. J. Bowering, housing fund treasurer, about one-third of the project's total cost of $750,000. Some gifts toward the project have already been received and while the club has no plans for a fund drive, tax-deductible donations will be welcome.

The club has already purchased the housing site — on Milton Street, once the site of the Oak Bay municipal yard. Without being on a main traffic artery, this is close to shops, a bank, buses and other facilities.

Plans prepared by architects Siddall, Dennis Warner, already approved by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. call for 72 suites, all about the same size, including bed-sitting room, kitchen and bath.

There will be a community room, elevator and shuffleboard slabs behind the structure. Parking for 12 vehicles will also be provided at the three-storey structure.

It is hoped that construction may start early in May. A call for tenders will be made shortly.

When I took the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course I was a college student. I took the course because I was working full time and going to school full time as well and I just didn't have enough time to get all my studying done. Reading dynamically I found, made all the difference. I could read much faster and studying was much easier. The study techniques made my reading much more efficient and now that I am in business, I find Dynamic Reading a great asset."

Pirate Gets Life

CALGARY (CP)—Paul Joseph Cini, 28, was convicted Tuesday on seven charges in connection with the hijacking of an Air Canada jetliner last Nov. 12 and was sentenced to life in prison on four of the charges.

He was sentenced to 15 years on another charge and five years each on the remaining two charges.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain of Alberta Supreme Court in his summation rejected a defence attempt to prove Cini's insanity at the time of the hijacking.

"I have no hesitation whatever in finding the defence of insanity has not been established and therefore find the accused guilty on each of the seven counts against him."

The defence called only one witness, Dr. Morris Carnat, a Calgary physchiatrist during the trial that started Monday.

Milvain, in passing sentence, said he will recommend to penal authorities that they treat Cini for such "medical and psychiatric care as they deem advisable."

He received the life sentences for:

- Placing an explosive substance and a sawed-off shotgun aboard property used for transporting people by air.
- Kidnapping with intent to unlawfully transport outside of Canada.
- Kidnapping with intent to hold for ransom.
- Interfering with the lawful use of property.

He got 15 years for extortion and the five-year terms were for illegal possession of dynamite and possession of a prohibited weapon, a sawed-off shotgun.

Carnat said he examined Cini on four occasions and "the more I saw him, I'm convinced this man is mentally ill."

By DON COLLINS

Unemployment across Canada rose by 15,000 from February to March with British Columbia accounting for a startling 80 per cent of the increase.

The immediate reaction of both provincial government and labor was to point to the heavy influx of people from across Canada. But there was a sharp division in the degree to which this was blamed.

'Fantastic Influx'—Gaglardi

In separate interviews Tuesday night Rob Minister Phil Gaglardi referred only to the of "transients from all over the country" and Victoria union official Neil Hindle spoke also of national and international problems.

In Ottawa, reaction to the national unemployment picture brought another call for an election from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and an expression of disappointment from New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

Figures from Statistics Canada show unemployment in Canada increased to 642,000 in March, representing 7.4 per cent of the labor force.

In B.C. the corresponding figure jumped from 70,000 in February to 82,000 in March, leving 8.6 per cent of the provincial labor force registered as unemployed.

The addition of 12,000 jobless in B.C. constituted an increase over February of slightly more than 17 per cent.

During the same month period the Atlantic provinces were hard hit with an increase of 8,000 to their jobless ranks. In Ontario there was an increase of 4,000.

Elsewhere the picture was one of improvement. In Quebec there were, 3,000 less people on the unemployment rolls and the same figure applied to the Prairie provinces.

There is another interesting comparison between B.C. and the nation when measuring the unemployment situation over a one-year period between March, 1971, and last month. The jobless figure dropped on a national basis by 8,000, while it increased by 9,000 in B.C.

No Strike Letup For Big 3 Cities

From UPI, CP

Public employees in Toronto, Vancouver and throughout the province of Quebec, including Montreal, were on strike Tuesday, shutting down civic and government operations and halting all but essential services.

The largest walkout was in Quebec, where about 210,000 civil servants went off the job "indefinitely," to back higher wage demands. It was their second strike in two weeks.

Hundreds of schools throughout the province were shut down and hospitals were limited to only emergency services. Government offices, licence bureaus, courts, highway maintenance and liquor outlets were all closed.

In Toronto, a strike by 4,000 civic employees moved into its second day with no early settlement in sight. Strikers included garbagemen, ambulance drivers, water filtration and sewage treatment crews, road and sidewalk repairmen, park employees and ferry operators.

Supervisory personnel and private operators maintained most services, but garbage collection was at a standstill and refuse piled up in the streets. Outside ambulance crews were brought in to ensure public safety.

A 24-hour strike by 3,000 city employees in Vancouver shut down virtually all civic operations but police and fire protection.

Those on strike included workers at community centres, provincial and family courts, libraries, the social service departmest and maintenance workers. Schools were not affected.

Included among the Quebec strikers were some of the 8,500 unionized employees of Hydro-Quebec, the province's power supplier, who defied a government back-to-work injunction and stayed off the job.

The Quebec government will institute judicial proceedings against unions who defied injunctions ordering essential services to be maintained in two cases during a strike by 210,000 Quebec public servants, Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier said Tuesday night.

In a third case, where he said a voluntary agreement to maintain the services had broken down, the government will seek an injunction.

L'Allier told a news conference Tuesday night that "in general, essential services have been maintained" in the strike which started Tuesday morning.

But he said that "in a cer-

Blast of Wind Drags 12 Chutists to Death

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (UPI) — A sudden blast of wind dragged a company of Spanish army parachutists for miles across rocky, volcanic ground Tuesday, killing at least 12 and injuring 61, many seriously.

An army spokesman said the accident occurred during manoeuvres of a company of the Bandera Roger de Lauria parachutist regiment on the small, volcanic island off the northwestern African coast.

"A sudden, terrific blast of wind dragged the men across rugged, volcanic soil just after they landed," the spokesman said. "Some were blown as far as four kilometers (2.5 miles)."

Socreds To Air 'Ask-Us' Spots

A series of one-minute radio advertisements sponsored by the provincial government for airing this spring and summer is designed as "an information service" for the people of B.C., not as a political instrument for the government, the government official in charge of its production said Tuesday.

Ray Orchard, a former radio broadcaster hired a few weeks ago by the government to supervise production of the broadcasts, added, however, that some of the questions asked the government might be "policy questions — why this was done and that wasn't."

A press release from the provincial secretary's department Tuesday morning announced the beginning of the program in which the government will buy advertising space on all B.C. radio stations to explain its programs and policies.

The broadcasts will be called Ask Your Provincial Government and cabinet ministers will answer selected questions sent in by citizens. Five one-minute advertisements will be heard each Saturday and Sunday for a four-month trial period, beginning April 29.

An official of CJVI radio station in Victoria said that while he was not involved in direct negotiations with the government, "certain pre-promotional material was received today by our station and the advertising has been accepted by three Victoria radio stations."

He said that he had no idea how many stations in the province would be handling the advertising, but his station, like others, "has instruc-

Senate Ducks Declaration Of War

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By a vote of 78 to 7, the U.S. Senate Tuesday refused to take a vote on a declaration of war against North Vietnam.

"I don't want a war there . . .", amendment sponsor Mike Gravel of Alaska said. "Maybe we could make it clear to the president if there are sufficient 'no' votes that there isn't sufficient support for this war. We ought to at least have the gumption to look them in the face and say, 'We declare war on you,'" he said.

But Senator Jacob Javits of New York said the senate would be misunderstood no matter how it voted on the amendment.

U.S. Military Optimistic

Viet Conflict Widens

SAIGON — Communist forces stormed South Vietnamese troops in Southern Cambodia Tuesday in the first major battle across the border since the North Vietnamese offensive began 13 days ago, military spokesmen said.

Another Communist force estimated at 7,500 men surrounded and attacked the South Vietnamese combat base Bastogne Tuesday, posing an imminent threat to the old imperial capital of Hue and to the northernmost U.S. base in South Vietnam.

More than 500 American reinforcements were moved up from Da Nang to the U.S. base at Phu Bai, which is just east of Bastogne and is 10 miles south of Hue.

The Cambodian clash was along Highway 3, 84 miles south-southwest of Phnom Penh and opposite South Vietnam's Chau Doc province.

The Saigon command also reported a major battle just below the Demilitarized Zone in South Vietnam's northern quarter and continued clashes around the embattled province capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon.

Allied commanders estimated the North Vietnamese force around Bastogne at three regiments of 2,500 men each.

The North Vietnamese launched five ground assaults and maintained a heavy mortar barrage against Bastogne Tuesday but failed to take it. They have cut off both air and ground supply to the base, However, and if it falls they will have a clear road to Phu Bai and the only other South Vietnamese base, Birmingham, protecting Hue.

Meanwhile, senior U.S. military officials were reported optimistic Tuesday over the ability of South Vietnamese soldiers to halt the offensive.

Sources giving the American military officials' views said the assessment was based on the carnage reported wrought by U.S. air strikes and the ability of South Vietnamese troops to prevent any meaningful North Vietnamese gain on the ground for the last week.

Traffic Carnage Near 2 Million

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The two millionth person to die in a traffic accident in the United States will probably perish in January, 1974, according to the Western Insurance Information Service.

According to the institute, the first American to be killed by a car died in New York in 1899, and the millionth died in Texas in 1951.

On B.C. Budget Cover

It's Bloomin' Surplus

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A popular folk song asks, "where have all the flowers gone?" Prince Rupert school board is asking, "where have all the flowers come from?"

One of the pictures on the cover of this year's budget address by Premier Bennett shows Booth Memorial junior high school. Brilliant red flowers border a sidewalk.

There is only one problem . . . no flowers have been planted at the school.

Principal John Ewing was told at the school board meeting that an artist painted bright red petunias around his school.

"Well, isn't that delightful. I guess that's one way to spend money," he said.

An ensuing discussion brought up the fact that petunias don't grow here. Zinnias were offered as an alternative, but it was pointed out they aren't a common flower in the area either. The damp climate makes it difficult to raise either flower.

Board chairman Iona Campagnola ended the discussion by suggesting the school gardener find out what the flowers are and plant them.

Union Bay Girl New May Queen

CUMBERLAND — A Union Bay school student, Margaret Davis, will be crowned May Queen in the 87th traditional celebration of Empire Day in Cumberland.

Queen elect Margaret will receive her crown from retiring queen Laurie Stockand. Serving the queen elect as maids will be Heather Jones and Janine Welch. Last year's maids were Patricia Sommerville and Audrey Stockand. Page boys are Ron Peacey and Gerry McKay and flower girl is Lonnette Polden.

To keep the roaring 20's theme in the public eye, a sidewalk store will be set-up opposite the post office. An almost genuine Chinaman is expected to be behind the counter selling hats and other souvenirs the week before the May 22 celebrations.

Prizes will be awarded the best male and female who portray the theme of the celebrations. Jim Somen and a committee will be in charge of this event.

Two 10-speed bikes will be given away May 22 with the draw taking place at 3 p.m. Tickets will be distributed to all elementary students in Courtenay school district but the holders of the lucky numbers must be on the grounds when the draw takes place.

A feature in the parade, which begins at 10 a.m., will be the second fire truck owned by Cumberland. The vehicle is now owned by Hays Trucking and is being sent over with two men, especially for the parade.

The parade will feature in addition to floats, three bands, marching units of land, sea and air forces as well as Wrenettes and color parties of the Royal Canadian Legion and women's auxiliary to the Legions. The recently formed Elks drill team will also be making a public appearance.

Islander Tops in Manitoba

CUMBERLAND — The daughter of a Cumberland native son, has won top honors in the vocal section of the Manitoba Musical Festival.

Lynne Moncrief, daughter of Colonel H. Moncrief, formerly of Cumberland was awarded the Tudor Bowl as top singer in the sacred music class. Lynne is the niece of Mayor William Moncrief of Cumberland and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Moncrief Sr. She is seen every Sunday on the TV program Hymn Sing.

The adjudicator said her selection was rendered with "light, airy poetics. She really made it on her own. Here is a star who shines steadily."

Three of Four Admit School Break, Theft

PORT ALBERNI — Three of four young Port Alberni men charged with break and entry and theft involving A. W. Neill high school have pleaded guilty.

Donald Neale, 20, Conrad Pelchat and a juvenile pleaded guilty in Port Alberni Provincial Court this week.

A fourth youth, Romeo Maksymiak, 21, has pleaded not guilty and was released on $2,000 bail until May 2.

Neale was released on $1,000 bail pending a pre-sentence report. He also admitted another break in at the school April 1. The juvenile was placed on indefinite probation. Pelchat was remanded until Friday.

Last week about $6,000 worth of goods were stolen from the high school including six typewriters, an expensive microscope and hand tools.

Police have also recovered a large number of musical instruments, a film projector, a tape recorder, a TV set and home economics equipment.

Mayor Over

CUMBERLAND — Mayor William Moncrief told Cumberland hospital board Tuesday night he has "had a belly full" after a recent meeting with deputy minister of health services Donald Cox.

The mayor asked to speak to the board Tuesday night after his Victoria visit on several municipal matters. Moncrief said he wanted to talk about the future of Cumberland hospital and not its internal administration. Hospital board chairman Jim Fomen was aware of his actions he said.

Moncrief said: "I don't think we're getting a fair shake. British Columbia Hospital Insurance Services have no plans for the future for the hospital, next year or five years from now."

Cox told him that he could hardly sleep at night when he thought about Cumberland hospital and its fire trap situation, the mayor said.

As soon as the top floor of St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox is finished, Moncrief said, he believed that the Cumberland hospital will be phased out.

Mourners make their way slowly from small Kuper Island church to burial site

August Jack begins last ride

Kuper Island Final Home for August Jack

Indian 'Gentleman' Bid Farewell

By KLAUS MUENTER
Colonist Correspondent

KUPER ISLAND — The ravens have stopped weeping and have flown away.

Hundreds of people from many Vancouver Island points and from the mainland came Tuesday morning to bury August Jack, who died last Thursday in his 108th year.

Believed to be the oldest person in B.C., he had lived for more than a century in the Westholme area and he had been a gentleman at heart and in manner.

Many of the people who came by ferry or by fishboat were relatives. High above the small Catholic Church, which could not hold all of them, an eagle soared and spread its wings in the frigid spring wind.

It was as if a symbol of freedom had become airborne while in the small church the people assembled to pray, to sing and to be grateful that a very old man had departed in peace. Outside, the mourners stood in groups and waited to accompany August Jack for the last time.

Below a soft swell ran in long white lines against the beach and further away tree studded islands lay in the peaceful morning. Some of those outside spoke of the miraculous healing of a white man, others talked of the man they had come to bury and some stood in silence.

Now and then the singing in the church became audible, drifting away without echo — and then everything went silent.

Slowly people filed out of the small church and pallbearers eased the coffin down the few steps and loaded it on a pickup truck for the last few hundred yards to the cemetery.

A young priest carefully closed the door of the church, which soon was deserted again. From below, blue smoke rose from the openings in the longhouse where food was prepared for the many mourners.

Reaching the cemetery the crowd walked past the large wooden cross and assembled for the last rites of a world that August Jack had no longer been able to understand.

He always had been close to nature and until he reached the age of 87 years he had worked as a longshoreman. Born on Lummi Island, Wash., he was a member of the Kuper Island Band, which also was hosting his final homecoming.

Meanwhile, back at the Kuper Island school at the island's western shore, about a mile from the cemetery, youngsters prepared for their lunch hour and some of them watched the first mourners depart in the school boat and a small fishing vessel on their way back to Chemainus on Vancouver Island.

Others were to follow later in the ferry and aboard other fishing boats.

There was not much sadness left any longer because many had realized that Jack had walked slowly through another door.

From the Sheets She Did Retreat

NANAIMO (CP) — Police and civil defence crews searched in vain Tuesday for seven-year-old Heida McAlpine, reported missing in the Chase River area, near Nanaimo.

Plans were made to appeal to volunteers for an all-out search.

Then Heida was found. Sound asleep. Under her bed.

Fears for Beauty Spots Sparks Public Use Bid

PARKSVILLE — Concern for three Nanaimo area beauty spots will base a resolution to be presented Friday by the Arrowsmith Natural History Society to the Federation of B.C. Naturalists.

The areas are Little Mountain, Arbutus Point — also known as Madrona Point — and the Illusion Lakes near Horne Lake. All are in the Nanaimo regional district.

The history society will present its resolution at the naturalists' convention in Vancouver.

● Little Mountain stands nearly 1,000 feet above its surrounding area and offers a panoramic view of water and mountains in all directions. A forest lookout tower and microwave installation are located on Crown land at the summit.

Generations of district children have enjoyed Little Mountain. Boy Scouts have made their own trail up from Parksville; Girl Guides have always used the mountain for field trips, learning to identify wildflowers and shrubs — many of which have all but disappeared in the surrounding district, due to development.

Development is now spreading up Little Mountain, and the local society feels it would like to have a certain area preserved for the use of the public.

● Arbutus Point — originally known as Beaver Cove — is becoming a residential development. It was former B.C. Forest Products land and the only deep water bay in the Parksville area.

In early days, settlers and supplies landed there from historic ships such as the SS Beaver, the Emily Harris, the Maude, and others, before the road was put through from Nanaimo. Remains of the original wharf and warehouses are still to be seen.

The society believes that such a beautiful and historic site should be perserved for the enjoyment of the public.

● Illusion Lakes, is an area of exceptional beauty. It is an ideal spot for camping, picnicking, fishing, boating, riding, or hiking, and is of easy access from the highway.

The society's resolution to the federation will request help in efforts to have these areas set aside for the use of the public.

Building Permit Value Rockets by 400%

NANAIMO — The value of building permits issued in Nanaimo in the first three months of 1972 stands more than 400 per cent ahead of the figure for the same period in 1971.

City building inspector Ben Boers said Tuesday that to the end of March permits for construction totalling $1,890,000 had been issued. This compared with a total of $424,000 at the same time last year.

The figures for this year are broken down to show $1,043,000 in residential construction while new commercial building accounted for $743,800.

The building inspector said that although the figures are impressive — they do not represent an exceptional year at this point.

Nanaimo's record year was 1970 when permits were issued covering more than $8 million worth of new construction. However, the figure was boosted that year by permits for a $3 million addition to Nanaimo General Hospital and a $2 million sawmill on the city's waterfront.

Boers also said the city is experiencing a shortage of residential building lots.

"There aren't many vacant lots left so most of the new construction is taking the form of apartments rather than single family dwellings."

Individual homes are being built at a greater rate outside the city than within the boundaries, he added.

Cumberland To Be 'Phased Out'

Mayor 'Had a Belly Full' Over Hospital's Future

By RUTH McKELLAR

CUMBERLAND — Mayor William Moncrief told Cumberland hospital board Tuesday night he has "had a belly full" after a recent meeting with deputy minister of health services Donald Cox.

The mayor asked to speak to the board Tuesday night after his Victoria visit on several municipal matters. Moncrief said he wanted to talk about the future of Cumberland hospital and not its internal administration. Hospital board chairman Jim Fomen was aware of his actions he said.

Moncrief said: "I don't think we're getting a fair shake. British Columbia Hospital Insurance Services have no plans for the future for the hospital, next year or five years from now."

Cox told him that he could hardly sleep at night when he thought about Cumberland hospital and its fire trap situation, the mayor said.

As soon as the top floor of St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox is finished, Moncrief said, he believed that the Cumberland hospital will be phased out.

A hospital referendum passed two years ago was put to the voters of Cumberland under "false pretences," Moncrief charged. In the referendum $24,000 was promised for Cumberland hospital out of the quarter mill levy. Now it would get $10,000 and no future, Moncreif said.

He claimed BCHIS had no answers to his questions, "all they did was beat around the bush and offer me files to read".

During his talk, Moncrief told the hospital board he wanted it to be known that he did not like taking public action without the knowledge of Dan Campbell, the MLA for Comox. He said several phone calls had been made in an effort to contact him. Campbell is on the northern end of Vancouver Island at present.

Moncrief repeated his faith in a public statement made by Campbell, who said that as long as he is the representative of the Comox area the hospital will not be taken away from Cumberland.

"I want to go on record", Moncrief said, "but my remarks are not meant to hit Dan Campbell in the eye".

Moncrief claimed the whole matter was a political issue. He said he felt the situation and problems should be made public so that everyone will know just what is going on regarding the Cumberland hospital.

Board member Bryson Parham said the board must make it a political issue.

Board chairman Fomen said it is time for concerned people to take up the battle.

"We've been going on the basis that it's lovely today and that it will be lovely again tomorrow and that is not true".

Fomen said he hoped that at the annual meeting of Cumberland Hospital Association next Tuesday, a board of directors will be elected which is prepared to "go all the way."

Motorists Lose Snow Battle

A flurry of minor traffic mishaps resulted from about four inches of snow which blanketed roads between Tofino and Port Alberni Tuesday, Tofino RCMP reported.

RCMP detachments in Gold River and Campbell River, meanwhile, reported light snowfall in their areas Tuesday night. They said the snow began to fall about 6 p.m.

Central Saanich Family Hit Fourth Time

A 21-year-old man who was killed when his car flipped into a ditch near Shawnigan Lake late Monday night became the fourth member of a Central Saanich family to die in traffic mishaps this year.

Dead is Roderick Allen Clifford, of 929 Stellys Cross Road, Central Saanich. A women passenger, Cathy Harvey of Campbell River, was uninjured.

On Feb. 25, Clifford's mother, father and a sister, also of Stellys Cross Road, were killed in a car-truck accident on the Cariboo Highway, 20 miles south of Williams Lake.

They were Joseph Clifford, 47, a company director of Hayward's Funeral Chapel, his wife, Florence, 46, and a daughter, Valerie Dawn, 15. The father was driver of the car.

The Monday night mishap, Shawnigan Lake RCMP reported, occurred about 11:15 p.m. on the Shawnigan Lake-Mill Bay Road.

Surviving members of the Joseph Clifford family are four sons and one daughter ranging from five to 23 years old.

'No Lawful Excuse' for Shooting

DUNCAN — Steven Lloyd Smith, of Duncan was convicted of dangerous use of a firearm Tuesday in Duncan Provincial Court, and remanded until May 2 for sentencing.

Judge Lance Heard said Smith had no lawful excuse for shooting the gun and should have unloaded it rather than fire it. The charges arose out of an incident Dec. 5 which resulted in the shooting of Brent Clackson by Robin Chaster at a party in Chaster's home.

Defence for Smith claimed he was acting to prevent further injury by discharging the gun into an unoccupied chesterfield.

Duncan Council To Spread Good Word—Its Own

DUNCAN—In an age of communication, Duncan city council has decided to inform the public and promote itself a little more.

A decision to advertise council meetings in advance to acquaint the public more with city business followed Ald. Allan Kerr's remarks at Monday night's meeting that the ordinary taxpayer had only a faint knowledge of what was going on in the council chamber.

Kerr said a survey was recently conducted under his supervision and 73 city ratepayers were questioned by four people.

The questions and answers were: "Do you know where city council members meet?" In reply 48 said at city hall, nine replied somewhere at city hall and 15 did not know.

"Do you know how often council members meet?" Sixty-eight had no idea and five thought a few times a year.

To the last question, "Do you know how many members are on council?" Only eight had the right answer, six, and the rest said four.

Kerr said: "The survey showed that there is little interest in council business and I think we should advertise to let people know that the council meetings are open to the public."

Ald. Ken Paskin was not surprised by the lack of interest because, he said, "We are not exactly known as a swinging group and perhaps that reflects on the activities of the council.

"Council is the most frustrating group I ever have belonged to. I would not want to invite my friends to come to council meetings because I would be afraid that I would lose some of them."

Without too much further argument council decided to try advertising its meetings for three or four months.

'Fantastic Influx'—Gaglardi

Unemployment across Canada rose by 15,000 from February to March with British Columbia accounting for a startling 80 per cent of the increase.

The immediate reaction of both provincial government and labor was to point to the heavy influx of people from across Canada. But there was a sharp division in the degree to which this was blamed.

In separate interviews Tuesday night Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi referred only to the migration of "transients from all over the country" and Victoria union official Neil Hindle spoke also of national and international problems.

In Ottawa, reaction to the national unemployment picture brought another call for an election from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and an expression of disappointment from New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

Figures from Statistics Canada show unemployment in Canada increased to 642,000 in March, representing 7.4 per cent of the labor force.

In B.C. the corresponding figure jumped from 70,000 in February to 82,000 in March, leving 8.6 per cent of the provincial labor force registered as unemployed.

The addition of 12,000 jobless in B.C. constituted an increase over February of slightly more than 17 per cent.

During the same month period the Atlantic provinces were hard hit with an increase of 8,000 to their jobless ranks. In Ontario there was an increase of 1,000.

Elsewhere the picture was one of improvement. In Quebec there were, 3,000 less people on the unemployment rolls and the same figure applied to the Prairie provinces.

There is another interesting comparison between B.C. and the nation when measuring the unemployment situation over a one-year period between March, 1971, and last month. The jobless figure dropped on a national basis by 8,000, while it increased by 9,000 in B.C.

Pirate Gets Life

CALGARY (CP)—Paul Joseph Cini, 28, was convicted Tuesday on seven charges in connection with the hijacking of an Air Canada jetliner last Nov. 12 and was sentenced to life in prison on four of the charges.

He was sentenced to 15 years on another charge and five years each on the remaining two charges.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain of Alberta Supreme Court in his summation rejected a defence attempt to prove Cini's insanity at the time of the hijacking.

"I have no hesitation whatever in finding the defence of insanity has not been established and therefore find the accused guilty on each of the seven counts against him."

The defence called only one witness, Dr. Morris Carnat, a Calgary physchiatrist during the trial that started Monday.

Milvain, in passing sentence, said he will recommend to penal authorities that they treat Cini for such "medical and psychiatric care as they deem advisable."

He received the life sentences for:

- Placing an explosive substance and a sawed-off shotgun aboard property used for transporting people by air.
- Kidnapping with intent to unlawfully transport outside of Canada.
- Kidnapping with intent to hold for ransom.
- Interfering with the lawful use of property.

He got 15 years for extortion and the five-year terms were for illegal possession of dynamite and possession of a prohibited weapon, a sawed-off shotgun.

Carnat said he examined Cini on four occasions and "the more I saw him, I'm convinced this man is mentally ill."

No Strike Letup For Big 3 Cities

From UPI, CP

Public employees in Toronto, Vancouver and throughout the province of Quebec, including Montreal, were on strike Tuesday, shutting down civic and government operations and halting all but essential services.

The largest walkout was in Quebec, where about 210,000 civil servants went off the job "indefinitely," to back higher wage demands. It was their second strike in two weeks.

Hundreds of schools throughout the province were shut down and hospitals were limited to only emergency services. Government offices, licence bureaus, courts, highway maintenance and liquor outlets were all closed.

In Toronto, a strike by 4,000 civic employees moved into its second day with no early settlement in sight. Strikers included garbagemen, ambulance drivers, water filtration and sewage treatment crews, road and sidewalk repairmen, park employees and ferry operators.

Supervisory personnel and private operators maintained most services, but garbage collection was at a standstill and refuse piled up in the streets. Outside ambulance crews were brought in to ensure public safety.

A 24-hour strike by 3,000 city employees in Vancouver shut down virtually all civic operations but police and fire protection.

Those on strike included workers at community centres, provincial and family courts, libraries, the social service departmest and maintenance workers. Schools were not affected.

Included among the Quebec strikers were some of the 8,500 unionized employees of Hydro-Quebec, the province's power supplier, who defied a government back-to-work injunction and stayed off the job.

The Quebec government will institute judicial proceedings against unions who defied injunctions ordering essential services to be maintained in two cases during a strike by 210,000 Quebec public servants. Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier said Tuesday night.

In a third case, where he said a voluntary agreement to maintain the services had broken down, the government will seek an injunction.

L'Allier told a news conference Tuesday night that "in general, essential services have been maintained" in the strike which started Tuesday morning.

But he said that "in a cer-

Blast of Wind Drags 12 Chutists to Death

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (UPI) — A sudden blast of wind dragged a company of Spanish army parachutists for miles across rocky, volcanic ground Tuesday, killing at least 12 and injuring 61, many seriously.

An army spokesman said the accident occurred during manoeuvres of a company of the Bandera Roger de Lauria parachutist regiment on the small, volcanic island off the northwestern African coast.

"A sudden, terrific blast of wind dragged the men across rugged, volcanic soil just after they landed," the spokesman said. "Some were blown as far as four kilometers (2.5 miles)."

Socreds To Air 'Ask-Us' Spots

A series of one-minute radio advertisements sponsored by the provincial government for airing this spring and summer is designed as "an information service" for the people of B.C., not as a political instrument for the government, the government official in charge of its production said Tuesday.

Ray Orchard, a former radio broadcaster hired a few weeks ago by the government to supervise production of the broadcasts, added, however, that some of the questions asked the government might be "policy questions — why this was done and that wasn't."

A press release from the provincial secretary's department Tuesday morning announced the beginning of the program in which the government will buy advertising space on all B.C. radio stations to explain its programs and policies.

The broadcasts will be called Ask Your Provincial Government and cabinet ministers will answer selected questions sent in by citizens. Five one-minute advertisements will be heard each Saturday and Sunday for a four-month trial period, beginning April 29.

An official of CJVI radio station in Victoria said that while he was not involved in direct negotiations with the government, "certain pre-promotional material was received today by our station and the advertising has been accepted by three Victoria radio stations."

He said that he had no idea how many stations in the province would be handling the advertising, but his station, like others, "has instruc-

Senate Ducks Declaration Of War

WASHINGTON (UPI)—By a vote of 78 to 7, the U.S. Senate Tuesday refused to take a vote on a declaration of war against North Vietnam.

"I don't want a war there . . .", amendment sponsor Mike Gravel of Alaska said. "Maybe we could make it clear to the president if there are sufficient 'no' votes that there isn't sufficient support for this war. We ought to at least have the gumption to look them in the face and say, 'We declare war on you,'" he said.

But Senator Jacob Javits of New York said the senate would be misunderstood no matter how it voted on the amendment.

U.S. Military Optimistic

Viet Conflict Widens

From UPI, AP

SAIGON — Communist forces stormed South Vietnamese troops in Southern Cambodia Tuesday in the first major battle across the border since the North Vietnamese offensive began 13 days ago, military spokesmen said.

Another Communist force estimated at 7,500 men surrounded and attacked the South Vietnamese combat base Bastogne Tuesday, posing an imminent threat to the old imperial capital of Hue and to the northernmost U.S. base in South Vietnam.

More than 500 American reinforcements were moved up from Da Nang to the U.S. base at Phu Bai, which is just east of Bastogne and is 10 miles south of Hue.

The Cambodian clash was along Highway 3, 84 miles south-southwest of Phnom Penh and opposite South Vietnam's Chau Doc province.

The Saigon command also reported a major battle just below the Demilitarized Zone in South Vietnam's northern quarter and continued clashes around the embattled province capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon.

Allied commanders estimated the North Vietnamese force around Bastogne at three regiments of 2,500 men each.

The North Vietnamese launched five ground assaults and maintained a heavy mortar barrage against Bastogne Tuesday but failed to take it. They have cut off both air and ground supply to the base, However, and if it falls they will have a clear road to Phu Bai and the only other South Vietnamese base, Birmingham, protecting Hue.

Meanwhile, senior U.S. military officials were reported optimistic Tuesday over the ability of South Vietnamese soldiers to halt the offensive.

Sources giving the American military officials' views said the assessment was based on the carnage reported wrought by U.S. air strikes and the ability of South Vietnamese troops to prevent any meaningful North Vietnamese gain on the ground for the last week.

On B.C. Budget Cover

It's Bloomin' Surplus

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A popular folk song asks, "where have all the flowers gone?" Prince Rupert school board is asking, "where have all the flowers come from?"

One of the pictures on the cover of this year's budget address by Premier Bennett shows Booth Memorial junior high school. Brilliant red flowers border a sidewalk.

There is only one problem . . . no flowers have been planted at the school.

Principal John Ewing was told at the school board meeting that an artist painted bright red petunias around his school.

"Well, isn't that delightful. I guess that's one way to spend money," he said.

An ensuing discussion brought up the fact that petunias don't grow here. Zinnias were offered as an alternative, but it was pointed out they aren't a common flower in the area either. The damp climate makes it difficult to raise either flower.

Board chairman Iona Campagnola ended the discussion by suggesting the school gardener find out what the flowers are and plant them.

Duncan Liberals Choose Youth

DUNCAN — Cowichan-Malahat Liberals have put their weight behind a man only a year older than the present B.C. government.

The Liberal Party chose Daniel Clements Tuesday night to represent the party in the next provincial elections.

Clements, 21 and married, defeated Cowichan district school teacher Doug Stewart, 44, in a ballot vote by the 23 party members at the convention.

Lawyer Mike Coleman, who nominated Clements said, "I feel he has a good chance of drawing not only present support but future support to the party."

Clements stressed party organization and greater youth involvement in his address to the convention.

In an interview later he said: "I took the Liberal nomination beeause youth today are not involved in politics as were the youth of the last generation. Without the younger generation's support, there is no way we can continue our democratic form of government."

Concerning the present government he said: "The Social Credit have not done a bad job but their policies as of the last four of five years have been dated. This is showing up especially in our environment."

Nicklaus Tops Money List By a Mile

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Nicklaus has pulled away from the pack in pro golf's money winning race as a result of his victory in the Masters Sunday.

Nicklaus earned $25,000 for winning the Masters and boosted his total earnings this year to $134,473, figures released today by the PGA Tournament Players Division show.

Nicklaus, in capturing his fourth Masters championship, posted his third victory — he also has two seconds — in nine tournaments this year.

George Archer is a distant second among the top money-winners with $99,525. Tom Weiskopf, who wound up tied for second in the Masters, ranks third with $80,469.

Others among the top 10 include: 4. Bob Rosburg, $60,350; 5. Bob Murphy, $59,744; 6. Bruce Crampton, $59,662; 7. Grier Jones, $58,853; 8. Tony Jacklin, $56,570; 9. Jerry Heard, $56,556, and 10. Lanny Wadkins, $49,346.

Transfer Fee Sets Record

BELT HORIZANTE, Brazil — Tostao, the Brazilian soccer star often described as the successor to the great Pele, was purchased Monday by the Vasco da Gama soccer club of Rio de Janeiro for an estimated $560,000, reportedly the highest transfer fee for any athlete in the history of the Americas.

Tostao, a center-forward, has been with Cruzeiro since starting his pro career in 1964. Last year he was chosen to succeed Pele as the wearer of jersey number 10 on the Brazilian national team.

$2.5 Million for Centre

Offer by Bennett Hailed by Purdy

Premier Bennett's offer Tuesday of $2.5 million in provincial funds toward a Victoria convention centre "is a delight and a challenge" to organizers of the Pacific Centre Foundation.

Allan Purdy, acting chairman of the foundation, said Tuesday that Bennett's offer puts the hopes of the group "six months ahead of schedule."

The foundation aims at reaction in Victoria, hopefully in the Crystal Garden building, of a civic centre that will meet both the cultural and convention needs of the region — a region which its members see extending at least as far as Nanaimo.

Purdy ... in sympathy

Without Debt

Bennett said he wants the long-awaited centre built "fortwith" and "without debt" to create jobs and provide the Victoria area with a necessary facility.

The province, he said, will pay one-third of the cost of construction up to a maximum of $2.5 million if the city puts up one-third of the cost plus the land and private enterprise and "individuals" put up the remainder.

Purdy, who said a favorable ear had been given the foundation by Victoria officials in its bid to acquire the Crystal Garden, saw the premier's offer as a "challenge" to the foundation, not as a possible new burden on city taxpayers.

Seek Balance

With a start like this, Purdy felt it was squarely up to the foundation to go after the balance, through grants or donations from areas that would benefit, from individuals, and through fund-raising drives.

"I feel," said Purdy, "that the premier is in sympathy with our goal, and that it is now up to us to pick up his challenge."

But Victoria municipal officials were skeptical Tuesday about the offer.

Aldermen commended the premier for his "good intentions" but pointed out that the terms of the offer were unacceptable to the city.

Can't Pay

They agreed that Victoria should have a convention centre but said that the city's financial share of such a project couldn't be paid out of current revenue, which Bennett said he meant by saying the centre should be built "without debt."

Bennett, asked for clarification, said the city could finance its share of the centre over a long period but the debt could not be charged against the centre's operation.

He also said he would consider a federal contribution as part of the municipality's one-third share.

Since Bennett used the term "convention centre," he was asked if he was precluding cultural facilities for the centre. He replied: "I don't want to be narrow on that point" — but he made it clear the cultural uses would be in addition to the basic tourist facility. If cultural facilities could be included in the total cost, he would go along with it.

In his original announcement, made in a telephone call to the legislative press gallery, Bennett said it was the government's opinion that a "convention centre and auditorium" should be built now.

No Land

Bennett made it clear the city's $2.5 million share would not include the value of the land which he said he understood was already available for a convention centre.

He wanted, he said, to encourage Victoria to move ahead with the project "forthwith" and described his cost-sharing offer as a continuation of the government's efforts to create jobs.

Mayor Peter Pollen and convention centre co-ordinator Ald. Clyde Savage were out of town Tuesday and unavailable for comment.

15 Mills

Ald. Ove Witt, chairman of council's recreation committee, said he was extremely pleased by the premier's offer, but the city should deal with it very cautiously.

"Under no circumstances should the city's taxpayers be burdened with the financial implications of building a convention centre. To pay the city's share out of the current budget is not possible. That would mean a mill rate increase of at least 15 mills," he said.

"We also have to consider the question of losses and revenue. Are the city's taxpayers expected to pick up possible losses? Who will administer the centre?" Witt asked.

Possible Site

The old Crystal Garden, he said, would be a possible site for a convention centre but council would have to decide that.

"We should also look at other sites. Maybe across from the city hall, or the two acres at Fishermen's Wharf on Dallas Road."

Ald. Percy Frampton also discounted the possibility of paying the city's share out of current expenditures.

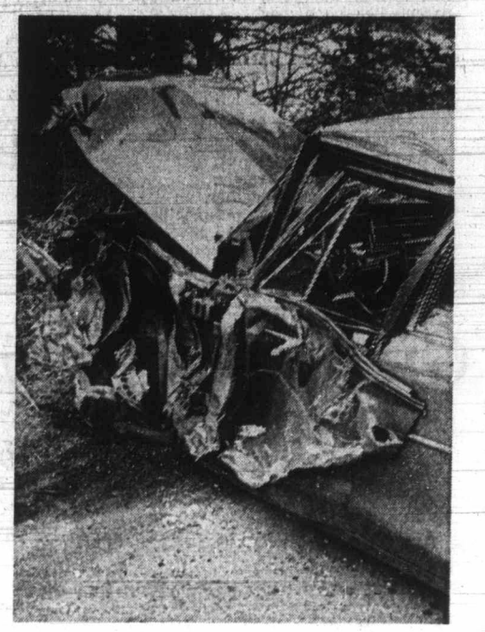
He suggested that the city approach the federal government for funds to build the convention centre. As far as he knew, Bennett said that federal grants would be considered part of the city's one-third contribution.

There was also the question of how to get private enterprise to come up with its one-third share.

The other possibility, Frampton said, was to build a smaller convention centre "for about $2 million," the Crystal Garden site, which had an estimated value of $750,000, would be used as the city's share. Frampson doubted, however, that the premier would go along with that.

Automobile Throws A Tandem

Big double pair of wheels went their own way in Saanich Tuesday afternoon after collision between gravel truck and car. Saanich police said westbound car slammed into rear wheels of eastbound truck on Trans-Canada Highway at Wilkinson, knocking off wheels. Both vehicles came to rest in ditch. Michael Patrick Kelly, 40, of 187 Virago Crescent, Colwood, driver of car was in fair condition Tuesday in Queen Victoria Hospital with broken leg, cuts received in crash, hospital authorities reported. Truck driver Robert Adrian, 32, of 5194 Lochside, Saanich, was unhurt.



View Royal School Dispute

Sewer Link Newest Proposal

Yet another possible solution to the long-standing problem of sewage disposal at View Royal elementary school was proposed to Greater Victoria school board's construction and maintenance committee Tuesday.

The new recommendation was brought forward by construction officials of the board because they felt the Pollution Control Board would not approve the board's last solution to the problem — installation of a self-contained secondary treatment plant at the school.

The new proposal is for sewage from the school to first be treated in a septic tank and then go in liquid form to a holding tank.

A plastic pipe would lead from the holding tank to the nearest Capital Regional Board sewer near Shoreline school, and the sewage would be pumped through the pipe into the sewer.

In the end the committee referred the whole matter back to the department officials for a final recommendation next month.

At the moment the board is using the septic tank at the school as a holding tank which is pumped out regularly at a cost of about $90 a week.

It had to take this step to prevent the school from being closed down because of inadequate septic tank facilities which were causing effluent to leak into the school fields and a nearby ditch and creek.

But the holding tank is only a temporary measure. The Greater Victoria health board has given the school trustees until the end of June to find an acceptable long-term solution to the problem.

Possible cost of the newest proposal would be about $4,500, the committee was told.

Sig Dietze, construction and maintenance supervisor, said the pipe would not have to be a large one, so little digging would have to be done to accommodate it. Neither would the pump have to be very large or expensive.

The pipe could probably run down the railway right-of-way behind the school and cut through at a railway culvert, he said.

The health board has said that before a secondary treatment plant could be approved, the Pollution Control Board would have to approve because some effluent would still be discharged into the creek.

The PCB is not likely to approve any such discharge of effluent, even if it is treated, Dietze said.

Trustee Hal Knight said he hoped that when the staff was reviewing the situation during the next month, they would also consider the possibility of improving the drainage system and still using a septic tank system.

Septic tanks, if efficiently used, were the best way ecologically to dispose of sewage,

Team of Doctors Battle To Save Youth's Foot

A team of three doctors spent most of Tuesday afternoon in an attempt to save a 17-year-old Victoria youth's right foot after an unusual accident during the noon hour at Oakland Industries, 1306 Wharf.

The doctors had not indicated late Tuesday whether the foot of Mark Christopher Shore, 927 Collinson, could be saved.

Shore was injured as he went through a 36-inch-square opening of the Oakland Industries ice room to resume work shovelling ice onto a worm conveyor which was taking it to a docked fishboat for use at sea.

Police said ice had built up near the opening and Shore's boot slipped on the ice. The opening also is used for the conveyor, which has sharp edges, and Shore slipped into it.

The edges sliced through the boot and most of Shore's leg just above the ankle.

Fellow workman Ron Olding, 24, of 355 Kindersley, turned off the conveyor while Donald Ruttan, 24, of 96 Sims, phoned for help and then returned to reverse the machine's gears and pull Shore's foot free.

A Garden City Ambulance crew of Larry Tuttle and Neil Leard, first on the scene, gave Shore emergency treatment and took him to Queen Victoria Hospital, arriving at 12:45. Police estimated the time between the accident and hospital arrival at less than 15 minutes.

Central Saanich Family

Fourth To Die

A 21-year-old man who was killed when his car flipped into a ditch near Shawnigan Lake late Monday night became the fourth member of a Central Saanich family to die in a traffic mishap this year.

Dead is Roderick Allan Clifford, of Stelly's Cross Road, Central Saanich. A woman passenger, Cathy Harvey of Campbell River, was uninjured.

On Feb. 25, Clifford's mother, father and a sister also of Stelly's Cross Road, were killed in a car-truck accident on the Cariboo Highway, 20 miles south of Williams Lake.

Killed in the mishap were Joseph Clifford, 47, a company director of Hayward's Funeral Chapel, his wife, Florence, 46, and a daughter, Valerie Dawn, 15. The father was driver of the car.

The Monday night mishap, Shawnigan Lake RCMP reported, occurred about 11:15 p.m. on the Shawnigan Lake-Mill Bay Road.

Survivors of the Joseph Clifford family are four sons and one daughter ranging from five to 23 years old, spokesmen close to the family said Tuesday night.

School Addition Bid Approved

Approval of a tender by W. Campbell Ltd., Saanich, of $204,986 for additions to Belmont senior high school was given Tuesday night by Sooke school trustees, subject to approval of the education department.

This approval, said superintendent E. E. Hyndman, was expected daily and trustees were advised that the contractor was prepared to start work immediately.

Also approved, on recommendation of the department, was the bid of Herb Bate Construction Ltd. of $6,264 for surface and sub-surface drainage at Wishart elementary school.

About 58 pupils from Grades 3 and 4 of Millstream elementary school will spend most of a week in June at Moorcroft Camp, a United Church of Canada site, near Parksville.

Approval was given in answer to a letter from H. I. Banks, Millstream principal, in which he said two teachers on his staff had requested that they be allowed to take the children.

All will be housed in cottages, with a leader to each and volunteer parents will take care of transportation as well as serving as cooks, hut leaders and a nurse.

The students will leave Tuesday morning, June 13, and return to the school Friday afternoon, June 16.

Victoria Engineer Cites Cost

Penny Meters Out?

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

There isn't much you can buy for a penny these days and soon, there may be less.

Victoria's traffic engineer Dave Campbell says he will recommend to city council that the use of pennies in parking meters be abolished.

Campbell says "pennies are a pain in the neck." Last month, more than 360 meters were jammed, most as a result of bent pennies.

"There is also the problem of winding the clockwork of meters which must be done by hand. If you throw in a dime, you activate the mechanism only once; if you use 10 pennies instead, you activate it 10 times," Campbell said in an interview Tuesday.

Some meters, he said, must be wound up three times a week. It just wasn't economically justifiable anymore to continue the use of pennies.

"We are one of the last major cities in North America to hold on to the pennies for our parking meters. We should get rid of them fast."

Meanwhile, city hall is stuck with mountains of pennies.

"Since the first meters were installed in 1947, motorists have deposited $3,288,482.48," said Mason Sheldrick, the city's assistant comptroller.

Most of that has been pennies — an estimated 280 million of them.

In 1971 alone, more than eight million coins were fed into parking meters for a total of $202,030.68. More than six million were pennies.

On an average day, the city's 1,671 parking meters swallow about 40,000 coins. Maintenance men bring the daily haul of about $450 to the accounting department in seven bags.

The coins are poured into a tray which is connected to the sorting machine. An employee keeps a sharp lookout for fake coins or washers, sometimes used to get free parking.

The machine neatly separates the pennies from the nickels and dimes, each flowing into bags mounted under the machine.

From there, the separated coins are put into a packaging machine. And a roll of coins is turned out every four seconds.

"In terms of coins, we outroll any other establishment in the city," said Sheldrick. Some parking garages may end up with more money, though, because they take in a lot of quarters.

The finished rolls go into bags which are sealed for deposit at the bank.

And then, the whole process begins again. The coins are circulated to the public which uses them for parking meters; the meters are emptied, the coins sorted, packaged and delivered to the bank.

City officials have always been eager to point out that the main purpose of parking meters is to regulate traffic and facilitate a turnover in parkers.

But with more than $3 million collected in the past 25 years, it is difficult to deny the value of parking meters as revenue producers.

You know the top speed of your car, but do you know the top speed of your tires?

Some cars can go faster than the tires that are on them will safely allow.

Not racing cars or "muscle" cars, but just everyday, ordinary sedans.

This terrifying prospect is a result of the everyday, ordinary driving some people do, and the kind of tires they happen to have.

For instance: If you commute to and from the city each day, and do a lot of constant high speed highway driving and cornering, the wear and tear on your tires (if they're the wrong ones for your kind of driving) can be worse than the wear and tear on you.

The battle of the bulge.

Foremost, is the problem of heat. That bugaboo of all tires.

Each time a tire moves, it flexes. (Squeeze and unsqueeze your hand rapidly. That's just one kind of flexing a tire goes through when it's moving.)

And each time it flexes, friction causes heat build-up in the tire. (Bend a coat hanger back and forth quickly and see how hot it gets.)

The faster you go, the more the heat. The longer you go faster; even more heat.

And if you do a lot of cornering without a tire designed to keep maximum tread on the road, the additional bulging in the sidewall can cause even more heat.

After a while, all this heat builds up, and can cause the tire to start literally "breaking down". The rubber gets soft, and weak. And eventually, the tire just isn't capable of safely performing at highway speeds over a sustained period. Even though your car still is.

The battleground.

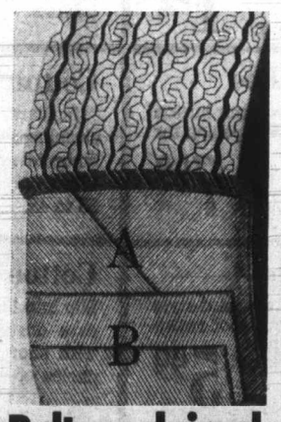
The Uniroyal Tiger Paw.

It's a belted bias-ply tire, and it's different than a conventional tire in some very significant ways as we'll try to explain if you'll bear with us:

First of all, the "carcass", or foundation of our tire ("A" in the diagram) consists of two full layers or "plies" of nylon running at a carefully engineered bias, or angle to each other. (Thus the term "bias-ply".)



Belts explained.

The precisely fixed angles at which these plies are placed results in minimum flexing when the tire is moving. Which in turn results in a cool-riding tire with low heat build-up.

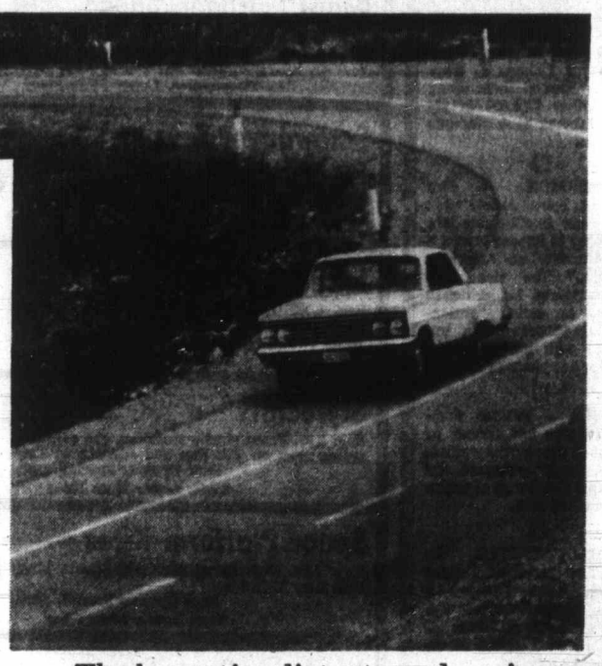
We use nylon because it's the strongest and the most durable carcass material known. (Which is also why you'll find it in jet plane tires as well as in "Indy" race car tires.)

Now the belts. (They're "B" in the diagram.)

We have two tough rayon belts that are bonded to the plies and run around the centre of the whole tire.

Much like a girdle which holds a woman in at the waist, so do belts keep the tire firm and prevent it from distorting at speed.

As well, they fight the tendency ordinary tires have to "lift" when cornering by keeping more tread flat on the road.



The less a tire distorts and squirms, the less heat is built up.

And the less the chances of tire strain leading to breakdown and failure.

What about mileage?

Once again, Tiger Paws deliver. Since the belts minimize the tire squirming on the road, less rubber scrubs off the tread. That, coupled with our extra deep tread grooves gives you extra increased mileage over conventional tires.

Safety. Performance. Mileage.

If you happen to do the kind of driving we've been talking about, maybe you need the kind of tire we've been talking about.

Tiger Paws start at about $34.*
